Former resident allegedly died of arsenic poisoning

By Jack C. Ventimiglia

Executive editor

GRANITE CITY — A former resident is the alleged arsenic poisoning victim of a Mascoutah woman.

Joan Hensley Davis, 54, faces a preliminary hearing Friday in St. Clair County Circuit Court, Belleville, on a charge of poisoning her fifth husband, James H. Hensley, Shiloh, formerly of Granite City.

Davis, arrested Feb. 19, is true on $100,000 bond.

Hensley, 62, a former technician with Illinois Bell Telephone Co., died March 8, 1986. He left behind two children in Granite City, Richard Hensley and Carolyn Taylor, who are contesting the will. Attempts to reach them were unsuccessful.

Their suit states Davis used improper means to get James Hensley to write his children out of the will, a charge Davis has denied.

St. Clair County Coroner Rick Stone said Wednesday that in September 1986 the coroner's jury declared James Hensley died of arsenic poisoning. The death was ruled a homicide. Stone said he could not discuss why charges were not brought for more than 16 months after the finding.

"I cannot comment on that at this time. We've worked long and hard on that (case) and I would not want to jeopardize it," Stone said.

Davis is married to a sixth husband, Verlen Davis,

Mascoutah. The death of another of Davis' husbands, Frank Mihlfeld, is under investigation. Davis divorced her three other husbands.

Mihlfeld died in 1977 and his body was exhumed in Fredericktown, Mo., on June 28, 1987, said Jay Hansmann, coroner for Madison County, Mo.

"The Illinois State Police and our sheriff, I and our prosecuting attorney here got a court order to exhumate because they felt he was poisoned," Hansmann said Wednesday.

Results of the autopsy were not released to Hansmann, he said. Madison County, Mo., would not be involved in prosecution if a homicide is declared in connection with Mihlfeld's death. (See DEATH, Page 10A)

Allen's sign forced from city

By Jack C. Ventimiglia

MADISON — The mobile campaign sign of Madison County State's Attorney Dick Allen is mobile again after being booted out of the city Wednesday on Mayor John Bellico's order.

"They're in violation of a city ordinance," Bellico said.

Bellico ordered the approximately 40-foot long, double-sided sign of a vacant service station on Madison County State's Attorney Dick Allen is mobile again after being booted out of the city Wednesday on Mayor John Bellico's order.

Police Chief Charles Griddick said a sign cannot exceed 4 feet by 8 feet.

Bellico said Allen agreed to move the sign, which was placed on the lot by Ronnie Martin, 34, Pontoon Beach. The sign had been on the National Super Market parking lot in Granite City, but was moved from there on management's orders Tuesday.

"I was paid to move the sign because it had a broken axle. I don't have anything else to do with it," Martin said Wednesday. "I moved it to another location after I fixed it — to Eagle Park. I moved it where I was told to put it" by Allen supporters. He declined to name them.

Martin said he does not own the sign. He said it is Allen's sign. Allen's opponent in the state's Fields: Vote fraud valid issue in race

By Mike Myers

Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Madison County Auditor Pete Fields, 42, Congressional candidate for the 21st District Democratic nomination, said the race will be so close that, if not watched carefully, it could be decided by ghost residents of self-service gasoline stations.

"Numbers that don't quite add up seem to indicate that Fields may have a real worry. The current number of registered voters in East St. Louis, according to the election board, is 27,287.

The latest population estimate is 42,472. Subtract from that the enrollment in District 189 Schools, 17,391, and the children under school age, 4,089, and it indicates a voting-age population of 23,112.

Quick arithmetic shows, by these figures, 4,174 more registered voters than persons of voting age.

James Lewis, executive director, East St. Louis Board of Elections, said this doesn't mean the election itself will be invalid. The board has purged the rolls on a regular basis since 1978, he said, and it recently purged 3,000 more names.

U.S. Attorney Frederick Hess said he is aware of the statements of Fields and the actions of the Election Board following them. His office is working on a plan for the election and Hess plans to make a general statement describing it 10 days prior to the March 15 primary.

The State Board of Elections has general supervisory power over all state elections, said Pat Freeman, an election specialist, though it does not control voter registration.

The board has no investigation into potential vote fraud in East St. Louis. To begin such an investigation, said Freeman, would require a written complaint being sent to her office. So far, none has been filed.

Fields said other issues have temporarily taken the place of vote fraud in the campaign, but "we haven't just forgotten about it. We will make a report on election day to see that none of these people (ineligible voters) get a chance to vote. We plan to use a lot of poll watchers."

Fields asked Hess to look into the election, but Hess did not take action with the state because "the local state officials may be dependent on those votes for their elected positions."

WITH THE FOURPOSTER bed in the background, a newly wedded couple goes through wedding night jitters in the musical "I Do! I Do!" The play stars Beverley Scroggins and George Cochran, who will perform at Sacred Heart/St. Joseph School, 2401 Sheridan Ave. Dinner will be catered by Franco Cupini, owner of A Taste of Italy.

Dinner theater coming to city

By Jack C. Ventimiglia

Executive editor

GRANITE CITY — A dinner theater sponsored by the Sacred Heart/St. Joseph Parent Teacher Association will begin at 7:15 p.m. Sunday, March 6. The play will be held in the school, 2401 Sheridan Ave.

The musical "I Do! I Do!" will be performed by Granite City Summerstage. The play stars Beverley Scroggins, a drama teacher at Granite City High School, and George Cochran, also of Granite City.

"I enjoy the show because it's meaningful to any person 25 or over who's married, has been married or ever thought of getting married. It goes through all the various stages of their lives," Scroggins said.

"I Do! I Do!" was written by Jan de Hartog, under the original title, "The Fourposter." It begins with a couple experiencing the shyness and embarrassment of their wedding night and continues through various stages in the couple's life to the point of their retirement, according to Lisa Fensterman, one of the dinner theater organizers.

She said the play affirms wedded bliss can last happily ever after. Dinner for the evening will be prepared by Franco Cupini, owner of A Taste of Italy, an Italian restaurant, 2624 Washington Ave. In addition to his occupation, Cupini has also served as a chef to a former president of Italy. Among those dining on Cupini's food was President John F. Kennedy.

Dinner will be served from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Fensterman said the menu will consist of Italian salad, chicken parmesan, pasta with white cream sauce, lemon butter, garlic, garlic bread, zuppa inglese dessert, and coffee or tea.

"It's a buffet to show them a variety of food," Cupini said.

"The chicken parmesan is going to be prepared in a way that will impress them."

Fensterman said the reason the play was chosen as a way to raise funds is that it will help get parishoners together.

"It was something different and we tried to make the price low enough to get people there. With the schools merging, we wanted something to get people together, fellowshiping," Fensterman said. St. Margaret Mary and Sacred Heart/St. Joseph may be merged, she said.

Fensterman said proceeds from the event will support Sacred Heart/St. Joseph School.

Tickets are $10 each and may be purchased at either St. Joseph or Sacred Heart rectories. The price includes beer and set-ups.

Tickets can also be purchased by calling Fensterman at 676-7160 or Mary Leach at 452-9202.

City council's closed caucus 'waste of time'

GRANITE CITY — The City Council meeting Feb. 23 began with a closed session to consider action concerning a judgment against the city for $247,507 in favor of Ella Smetherton.

A Circuit Court jury agreed with her that the city was negligent for allowing a 21st Street stop sign to be struck and twisted so that it could not be read. It was contended a vehicle later passed the sign and struck the side of her car on Madison Avenue, causing injury.

Returning to open meeting after the closed discussion of the litigation, the council voted 10-2 to reconsider its previous decision to appeal the judgment.

Aldermen then voted on a motion to stop the appeal process and pay the judgment. But that proposal ended in an inconclusive, 6-6 vote.

On the advice of City Attorney Mark C. Goldenberg, Mayor Von Dee Cruse declined to vote because, since eight votes would be required for passage, he did not hold the deciding vote. The motion was declared failed.

Goldenberg said the failed motion meant the city would continue to pursue an appeal. "What it means," Cruse said, "is that our little sashay into the conference room was a complete waste of time. Let's get on with the meeting."

Judicial nod denied to 6

By Bill Winter

Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Six of the 18 candidates on local judicial ballots are not recommended to voters, the Illinois State Bar Association announced Wednesday.

"Candidates for judicial office outside Cook County were evaluated in a poll of lawyers conducted by the ISBA," Donald C. Schiller, State Bar president, said. The results represent the opinion of lawyers having direct knowledge of the candidates, and not the opinion of the ISBA.

Strongly not recommended are Robert Mays (Democrat) and William C. Evans III (Republican). March 13 primary election candidates for the Jones vacancy in the 5th Appellate District. Two others seeking that position are recommended — Robert H. Howerton (D) and Granite City A. Andrews "Andy" Matosian (D).

Seventeen new gas lights, most of them to be placed in long blocks that have no lights except at the corners, were approved for purchase by the City Council. Gas lights were chosen because one of them lights up the same area as three arc lights and the cost is about the same.

Relocation key coroner issue

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Robert H. Thomas, 44, will challenge incumbent Dallas M. Burke, 61, for the office of Madison County coroner in the Democratic primary.

Burke was elected in 1972 and has held the office for four, four-year terms.

Thomas' platform calls for the coroner's office to locate in a municipal building. If not in Edwardsville, his first choice, then in one of "the numerous suitable buildings available in the county," he said.

Thomas said the current location of the office in Burke's funeral home is "akin to a circuit judge holding court in his house."

He said he knows of no other county office with an office in a private home or business, adding, "This may have been normal in the 19th century, but since we are almost into the 21st, I think it is high time we modernized this very important county office."

Burke said the office location in Alton places the administration in close proximity to five of Madison County's eight hospitals and at least half of the county's nursing homes.

She concedes Edwardsville, the county seat, is the ideal place if a central location is the most important consideration. At the same time, she argues that a case can be made for locating the office in the area that has shown the greatest need.

"If and when additional office space is available to Madison County it is probable that space would be provided to the coroner and that it would be utilized," she said. "This administration continues to work with the Madison County Board to insure that the coroner's office is located in a place that is in the best interest of the people of Madison County."

Dallas Burke

Burke said there are funds earmarked for a new morgue facility, but there is no money to cover the cost of an office move to Edwardsville. "If funds were to be appropriated for such a move, then it would almost certainly cost the taxpayer," she said.

Thomas said there are "unnecessary expenses" in the coroner's office budget. He proposes to eliminate such expenses, enabling him to "run a modern, efficient office at no increase in the tax burden to taxpayers of Madison County."

He plans to end the position of chief deputy coroner.

"The work can better be done by an active, effective coroner," he said.

Thomas owns and operates the Thomas and Mercer mortuaries in Granite City and the Lahey-Sedlack funeral home in Madison.

son, as well as Thomas Distinctive Memorials and the Creative Limousine Service.

He is married and the father of one son and four daughters. His late father served as coroner of Madison County.

Thomas is a past president of the Granite City Crippled Children's Association and a member of many groups, including Masonic Lodge 877 and the Scottish Rite of Southern Illinois. Burke is the widow of Thomas Burke, who was nominated for coroner but died before the 1972 general election. There are three daughters, two sons and 13 grandchildren.

A registered nurse as well as an active, effective coroner, she has the responsibility as coroner to determine the manner and cause of each person's death.

Though seeing the field as increasingly complex, she said her office has kept pace with new investigative styles and works effectively with prosecutors and police agencies.

Museum funds sought; chili benefit scheduled

Joe Morrison, owner of the Tacole Mexican Restaurants in Granite City and Fairview Heights, will be the chef for a chili supper to be held at the Madison Recreation Center, Seventh Street and Lee Avenue, on Saturday, March 5, from noon until 8 p.m.

It will benefit the Old Six Mile Historical Society's museum, according to Six Mile President Marguerite Lexow and event chairman Roberta Crawford.

A beverage and dessert will be included and carryouts will be available. Tickets are $3.50 per person and can be purchased from any Society member, or by calling 797-0433, 931-0670 or 931-3023.

Tickets for the Society's third annual spring dinner-dance, to be held Saturday, April 30, at the Granite City Knights of Columbus Hall, will soon be on sale, according to Shirley Adams, general chairman.

A silent auction, buffet dinner, entertainment and dancing are planned for the evening.

Further information will be forthcoming.

Teachers favor Pete Fields

Granite City Local 743 of the Illinois Federation of Teachers on Feb. 10 endorsed Pete Fields for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the 21st District.

The state IFT has announced it will make no endorsement in the district.

The state American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME) and the Illinois Education Association's 21st District Political Action Committee have declined to make an endorsement.

"We think these actions indicate that many people are taking a second look at this race. It shows a shift in momentum and we are very encouraged," said Phil Smith, labor coordinator for Fields.

Costello's campaign finances questioned

Campaign records from the Costello for Congress Committee reveal several conflicts of interest with the duties of a board chairman and congressman, congressional candidate Mike Mansfield said Feb. 13.

Mansfield and Jerry Costello are among those vying for the 21st Congressional District seat being vacated by Rep. Mel Price. Mansfield is on leave from Price's office; Costello is County Board chairman of St. Clair County.

Mansfield called Costello's acceptance of contributions from trash haulers, a consultant studying commercial use of Scott Air Force Base, lawyers and county employees clear conflicts of interest.

Campaign records show $3,000 received by Costello from MJJ trash hauling, $1,000 from a partner in the firm working on a feasibility study of expanding Scott Base, $90,448 from lawyers, $5,562 from Metro East Sanitary District employees and $31,124 from St. Clair County employees, Mansfield said.

Jerry is supposed to be the top official overseeing trash and landfill operations in St. Clair County, and I believe accepting contributions from persons in those industries raises questions about his performance in this capacity," Mansfield said. "Down the road, that money could affect his judgment when deciding on landfill expansion requests."

"The same concern arises over accepting money from R.W. Felling, a partner in the firm now studying the environmental impact of expanding Scott Base. Many people already have complained that their concerns about the expansion are not being addressed properly."

Mansfield said a letter the Costello campaign sent to lawyers requesting money — and recent allegations that Costello influences the court system by controlling the selection of judges — raise questions about the money received from attorneys.

Madison County's AIDS victims to get direct help

GRANITE CITY — People with AIDS and AIDS-related complex (ARC) in Madison County will get direct assistance in coping with their problems for the first time under a new state grant.

Coordinated Youth Services, Granite City, has provided countywide telephone hotline, free testing, and an education program with previous state grants. But it has not provided direct follow-up help for people who learn they have the disease.

With the new $18,225 grant announced Feb. 18 by the Illinois Department of Public Health, the service agency also will offer to help AIDS and ARC victims find treatment, get financial and legal assistance and deal with landlords and employers.

A "buddy system" program of recruiting and training volunteers to help AIDS sufferers and their families will also be expanded.

"Previously, everybody has been on their own to negotiate the different systems once they learn they have the disease," said Tony Miller, coordinator of the Madison County AIDS program operated by the Granite City agency.

Through the end of January, there have been 11 confirmed AIDS cases in Madison County, health department spokesman Linda Haase said.

Of those 11, eight have died, she added.

Library gets changed hours

Venice Public Library's new hours, effective March 1, are: Tuesday and Wednesday, noon to 5 p.m.; Thursday, 1 to 6 p.m.; and closed Fridays, Saturdays, Sundays and Mondays.

The department began keeping track of confirmed AIDS cases in 1984.

Miller said, "The rule of thumb is that, for every person with full-blown AIDS, there are about 10 with ARC. That would mean potential 110 persons who could use the support services."

People with ARC carry the AIDS-related virus but have not developed symptoms of the disease, which attacks the body's immune system.

Miller said a new case coordinator should start working by March 1 under the new grant. He said the funding runs until the end of June, and it is uncertain now whether it will be renewed.

The Granite City program was one of 17 agencies around the state awarded grants under a program established by the General Assembly last year.

Miller said 18 volunteers previously went through a "buddy system" training program to give sympathetic help to AIDS and ARC victims in this county.

He said he hopes AIDS and ARC victims will take advantage of the new direct assistance and "will understand that we are very responsible and professional and will safeguard their confidentiality."

Program staff member Carolyn Ehlers said about 150 people have taken advantage of the free testing program over the past 11 months.

Weber backs criticism of Allen

A former Madison County state's attorney said Feb. 12 he agrees with criticism of the state's attorney's office by Alton Police Chief Don Sandidge.

"Sandidge has complained that State's Attorney Dick Allen's office rejects too many cases and relies too heavily on plea bargain agreements to dispose of cases," Allen, in a letter to the Alton City Council and in a news conference Feb. 11, defended his office and said Sandidge's remarks undermine confidence in the criminal justice system.

In the news conference, Allen said Sandidge's comments were politically motivated and suggested some involvement by former state's attorney Don W. Weber.

"Weber, a Republican, was defeated by Democrat Allen in 1984. Weber is unopposed for the Republican nomination for state's attorney in the March 15 primary election. Allen is battling William R. Haine for the Democratic nomination."

"I know Don Sandidge is upset with the state's attorney office and I don't blame him," Weber said. He denied, however, that he encouraged Sandidge to comment.

"The Alton Police Department is one of the finest and most professional departments I dealt with in 12 years as a prosecutor," Weber said. "They always prepared their cases well and they are intelligent and resourceful," he said.

"Allen simply has no idea what a good case is, and the Alton police do," Weber said.

Allen said Sandidge's complaints are not well-founded. Allen said his office has filed about 3,000 cases during his first three years as state's attorney, more than any of his predecessors in a comparable period.

"Apparently, he (Sandidge) doesn't keep the statistics we do," Allen said.

He said 89 percent of all felony cases in Illinois over the last 10 years were resolved through plea bargaining. Allen said he intended no criticism of Alton detectives, who he said generally do a good job.

Woman alleged welfare cheat

MADISON — A Madison woman was among 14 persons indicted by a U.S. District Court grand jury in East St. Louis on Feb. 18 on charges of defrauding the Aid to Families of Dependent Children or Food Stamp programs.

Joanne Stroud, 30, 1427 Third St., was charged with four counts of making a false statement to obtain AFDC or Food Stamp benefits in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1001.

If an individual is convicted, each count carries a sentence of up to five years imprisonment and up to a $250,000 fine. In all the cases, the government is seeking full restitution of funds.

U.S. Attorney Frederick J. Hess said the cases are the result of a continuing joint investigation by the Office of the Inspector General of Health and Human Services, the U.S. Secret Service, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Illinois Department of Public Aid and the U.S. Attorney's Office. The total alleged fraud involved in the 14 cases is $100,410.

"The indictments serve as a warning that welfare cheaters will be found and prosecuted in Illinois," said Director Edward T. Duffy, Illinois Department of Public Aid.

"Through the close cooperation of the U.S. Attorney, Secret Service, FBI, HHS and my department, we were able to uncover and develop these cases. We pledge to continue to fight against welfare cheating across the state."

Blocking of 900-prefix telephone calls urged

The state has urged the Illinois Commerce Commission to take immediate action permitting parents to block use of 900 telephone numbers, which include dial-a-porn messages.

"Some parents are receiving monthly phone bills of up to $1,000 or more for calls their youngsters are making either without their parents' knowledge or without realizing how costly this service can be," Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan said.

"Parents should have the right to screen out these calls if they want to."

Under the proposal, Illinois Bell will be able, at the request of the phone customer, to set its phone switching operation to refuse access to calls made to a phone number with a 900 prefix.

Among the companies with 900-prefix phone numbers are teenage party lines, dial-a-porn messages and others.

Chicago customers will also be able to block out calls to 900-prefix calls, which include time, weather and other services which are billed as special calls.

Only 312-area customers will be able to block 900-prefix calls; the 900-prefix blocking will be available statewide. Because of facility limitations, an estimated 6 percent of the phones statewide cannot be blocked because of technical problems.

Hartigan's petition is in support of a request by Illinois Bell to authorize the blocking procedure.

If approved, the blocking service will be available 30 days after commission approval.

"This service will be provided, free of charge," Hartigan said. "I urge all parents to apply if they believe their children are misusing these 900-prefix services or may misuse them in the future."

Attorney general discusses compensation for victims

Attorney General Neil Hartigan released information recently about the Crime Victims Compensation Act provided through his office. According to Hartigan, the Illinois Crime Victims Compensation Act was enacted in 1973. It authorizes financial compensation for certain out-of-pocket expenses incurred by innocent victims or their families of violent crimes.

A person does not have to be a resident of Illinois, however, the crime must have occurred in Illinois for compensation to be considered. The crimes compensable are the following: murder, voluntary manslaughter, kidnapping, aggravated kidnapping, rape, deviate sexual assault, heinous battery, aggravated arson, arson, indecent liberties with a child, assault, aggravated assault, battery, aggravated battery, reckless conduct, reckless homicide and driving under the influence.

In order to file a claim, a person must be physically injured as a result of one of the above crimes. Other who may file a claim are the relatives of a victim who pay for reasonable medical and funeral expenses, or a relative who is a dependent of a deceased victim.

"In any case," according to Hartigan, "if you have been a victim, or if you are a relative of a victim, one of the above crimes and have experienced some out-of-pocket expenses, you should contact your local Attorney General's Office for more information."

Car license dates revised

Motorists who purchase new cars in January and February will receive 12-month renewal stickers for the first time, Secretary of State Jim Edgar said. Previously, only cars registered from March through December received 12-month stickers.

"The change to full 12-month registrations for all new cars is being done to accommodate the change in dates of license renewal," Edgar said.

"A growing number of people who buy cars in January and February told us they would prefer a 12-month registration," Edgar said. "This new system will accomplish that. In addition, 12-month staggered registrations will streamline our department by evening the workload."

DUI police

Arrest follows accident

Diana L. Wallace, 33, 206 Kirkpatrick Homes, was arrested and charged with driving under the influence Feb. 21 at 3:35 a.m. after the car she was driving, allegedly ran into a parked car at 2210 Edwards St. Wallace also was charged with illegal transportation of alcohol. She was released after posting $100 cash bail and her Illinois driver license.

DUI charge after crash

George E. Tompkins, 57, 2233 Cardiac, was charged with driving under the influence and failure to yield the right of way in an auto accident at 8:18 p.m. Feb. 20 at 17th Street and Grand Avenue. Tompkins allegedly drove past a stop sign into the path of a truck driven by William S. Affelt, 18, 2007 Rhodes St. Madison. Tompkins was injured in the crash and was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for treatment. Affelt and John R. Spivey, a passenger in his truck, escaped injury. Tompkins was released after posting $102 cash bail and his driver license.

Man charged with DUI

Kent D. Warren, 46, 2039 Harris St., Madison, was charged by Granite City police with driving under the influence of alcohol Feb. 12 at 21st Street and Madison Avenue. Also charged with illegal transportation of alcohol, he was released after posting $102 cash bail.

Something... they don't learn in school!!

We are proud to have the opportunity to provide young boys and girls with the responsibility of delivering our newspaper. Responsibility and financial management are two basics that are on the job training when a boy or girl accepts a newspaper delivery route. The responsibility is great because the entire effort of very talented people depends on their delivery of the newspaper on time no matter what weather conditions or other circumstances arise. Being an independent contractor for the payment and collection of money for newspapers are delivered. We recognize the responsibilities both financial and job performance and we would like to congratulate the girls and boys who value this experience and do an excellent job of satisfying our customers.

Labor group endorses five judicial candidates

The Illinois AFL-CIO State Committee on Political Education (COPE) has endorsed candidates seeking election to the Illinois Supreme Court and the Fifth Judicial District Appellate Court.

Those candidates endorsed are Judge Horace Calvo, formerly of Granite City, for the Supreme Court; and Judges Robert H. Howerton, Stephen M. Kernan, Richard P. Goldenherh, and Philip J. Rarikar for the Appellate Court. All five are Democrats.

Calvo, a circuit judge in the 3rd Circuit for 12 years, is serving on the Fifth District Appellate Court.

He served four terms as a state representative from the local district and also served as a special assistant Illinois attorney general.

Calvo currently serves as vice president of the Illinois Judges' Association. He resides in Glen Carbon.

Howerton of Carverville is a circuit judge in the First Circuit for 12 years. He is the attorney for Williamson County from 1972 to 1979. He also serves as an instructor with the state attorney's Trial Advocacy Program and the National Institute for Legal Advocacy.

Howerton also teaches at the Southern Illinois University School of Law and has been a member of the faculty of the Illinois Judicial Conference, which conducts seminars for judges throughout the state.

Kernan is a circuit judge of the 20th Circuit and serves as chief judge. He was appointed as a judge in 1974 at age 26, the youngest judge appointed in Illinois. He is a past board member of St. John's Orphanage, Belleville.

Goldenherh is a 20th Circuit judge and a member of several Illinois Supreme Court and State Bar Association committees. He is third vice president of the Illinois Judges' Association. Goldenherh has taught at St. Louis University School of Law, Webster University and McKendree College.

Rarikar, a circuit judge in the 3rd Circuit, served two terms as chief judge. Rarikar is a former assistant state's attorney, a city attorney and a township attorney. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the Illinois Judicial Conference and the Illinois Supreme Court Committee for the Operation of the Judicial System.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

Grandparents sometimes inquire as to whether or not they have a legal right to visitation with their grandchildren. Prior to 1983, if the parents denied the grandparents visitation, the Court would require it only if the grandparents could show "special circumstances." This was modified by statute, and Illinois law now expressly provides for grandparent visitation in certain situations. If there is a dissolution of marriage or the death of a parent, the Court can grant such visitation if it is in the best interests of the child.

Recently an Illinois Appellate Court was faced with an appeal from a grandmother which attempted to carry this right one step further. In this case, the parents were not getting a divorce nor was there a death of one spouse. Rather, the parents simply did not want the grandmother to see the child. The grandmother brought suit against her son and his wife seeking a Court order which would require them to grant her visitation with her only grandchild.

By way of background, the woman bringing this action was the natural mother of the child's father. Her granddaughter was born in April of 1983, four months after the new law on grandparental visitation went into effect. The grandmother alleged in her complaint that since the birth of the granddaughter, she had repeatedly asked the parents to grant her some type of reasonable visitation, but that all these requests had been denied. Apparently it was conceded by all parties to this suit that the grandmother was a happily married woman who enjoyed a good reputation in the community and was financially well-off.

Should the Courts require the parents to allow the grandmother visitation under these circumstances? The Court in this case refused to require the parents to allow visitation with the father's mother. The Court felt that the intent of the legislature was that such visitation only be allowed in cases where there was divorce or the death of one parent. Since this was not involved in this instance, the trial Court locked jurisdiction in the case. The Appellate Court noted that it was sympathetic to the grandmother's plight, but that the obligation of the parents to grant her visitation was a moral obligation rather than a legal one.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Harrison

Harrisons to celebrate
70th wedding anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan F. (Helen) Harrison, 2562 Cleveland Blvd., will observe their 70th wedding anniversary March 9.

The Harrisons were married in Belleville in 1918. The couple resided in Christopher, Ill., for eight years before moving to Granite City to become 62-year residents.

Harrison's first job in Granite City was at the City Ice and Fuel Co. He started as the lowest office employee and advanced to superintendent of the plant. In 1947, he received an appointment as state auditor, a position he filled until he retired in 1969.

As a sideline, he operated a private income tax business for 30 years, which he closed Dec. 31.

Harrison has been a master mason for 45 years, a notary public for 65 years, a long-time member of the Granite City Optimist Club and frequently a guest columnist for local newspapers.

Helen Harrison received formal training as a pianist at the Strausberg Conservatory of Music in St. Louis. While she lived in Christopher, she was a pianist at a theater when silent movies were shown. She also played for Sunday School and church services at several different Christian churches.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrison are still active members at Central Christian Church, Granite City, and Harrison has been a Christian Church deacon for 65 years.

The Harrisons have three sons. Marion F. Harrison, Peru, Ill., is the division manager for Illinois Power Co., and covers the northern part of Illinois; and Robert P. Harrison, Granite City, also is employed by Illinois Power in the engineering department. The Rev. Russell P. Harrison, who is retired, lives in Indianapolis and has spent his life in service with the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ). He has circled the world on three different occasions and has preached in more than 75 different countries.

The Harrisons have eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

CONQUER THE FEAR OF FAILING

Is there any fear that holds us back as individuals as much as the fear of failure. I think not.

To understand the fear of failure, we must first define the term. Webster defines it as a "deficiency, non-performance, want of success".

But, that isn't how most people define failure. Most people feel that they have failed if those around them do not view them as a success. If they do not live up to society's expectations in every way, they consider themselves failures.

Too often, we let other's expectations of us dictate how we must about ourselves. From the time we are children, we let other people define success and failure for us. By so doing, we cripple our imagination and our spirit, and we become afraid of failure. We become afraid that society won't approve of us if we don't live up to its definition of success.

In his book, "Your Erroneous Zones", Dr. Wayne Dyer makes the point that failure does not exist, that failure is simply someone else's opinion of how a certain act should have been performed. I agree with him.

Look at how subjective success and failure is.

If you tried to perform a task and were unsuccessful seven times out of 10, would you be a failure? Most people would probably tell you that you were. However many major league baseball players make upwards of $1,000,000 per year for succeeding in hitting a baseball safely only three out of every ten times they appear at bat.

In nature, an animal tries to catch dinner many times before he finally succeeds. If the lion would give up after the first, second or tenth time he failed to snare a zebra, lions would have become extinct eons ago.

Yet, we feel that we must succeed 100% of the time. If we aren't completely successful in everything we do, we back off and stop trying. We fear failure so much that we don't give ourselves a chance to succeed.

Don't allow the fear of failure to stop you from trying to do, "Live Life Every Day".

you can bank on it!

DREW KARANDJEFF
Chairman

Q. Wouldn't it be easier to buy T-Bills from the Federal Reserve directly, or from a Federal Reserve Bank or branch?

A. Actually, neither source is as convenient, nor as simple, as purchasing a Treasury or T-Bill from your bank. Even if you live close to a Federal Reserve Bank or branch, there are forms to complete, and you must bring along a certified personal or bank check for the T-Bill's full face value. Buying by mail from the Federal Reserve in Washington is time consuming and, again, there is considerable paperwork involved. Also, you must pay the full face value of the T-Bill. On the Thursday following a Monday transaction, for example, you would get a refund check for the discounted portion of the bill. For a small fee, your bank will take care of all the paperwork, as well as save the time and reinvestment opportunities which might be missed through the mail process.

FEET FIRST

WALKING INTO TROUBLE

By Dr. Claude Hiles

Stubbing a toe can result in a fracture that seems all out of proportion to the collision. The patient must realize, however, that even walking along at five miles per hour can produce a foot-awing of twice that speed. In addition, look at the damage that some automobile bumpers sustain at only one mile an hour. Initially, even only a stubbed toe will swell up and turn black-and-blue. Even though most stubbed toes do not result in a fracture, it may be best to have it x-rayed. At the very least, a stubbed toe should be properly taped. At worst, a fractured toe is going to require professional treatment. In these cases, it is best to be conservative in the approach to treatment.

Matthew 8:7 ... "And Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt, I will come out of thee."

I pray for a way to convince my readers to believe that God is the measure of persons. He loves us all in the same measure. He loves good people and He loves bad people. The Bible message is clear. He died to save sinners.

Jesus will come to you in your need. If you are sick, He will heal you. If you are depressed, He will lift you. In sorrow He will comfort you. Christ's own words are, "If any man come unto me, I will in no wise cast him out."

You do not have to go anywhere to find Christ. Only open your heart and ask him to come to you. Surely you will hear him say, "I will come."

Retired workers discuss Wellness Center

The regular monthly meeting of the National Association of Retired Federal Employees was held at Charlie's Restaurant on Feb. 8, with 52 in attendance.

President Gene Ross called the meeting to order. The invocation was given by Second Vice President Thara Erney.

Following lunch, the meeting was turned over to Elmer Ebrecht, program committee chairman, who introduced Vanett Morgner, a physiologist with the Wellness Center of St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

Morgner defined wellness as the science of teaching people to take care of themselves. With the aid of slides, she described the center and the program offered, then answered questions.

The minutes were read by the Secretary Ruth M. Stoyanoff. Helen Martin was unable to attend due to illness. Stoyanoff also read the treasurer's report.

In the absence of First Vice President Alex Ducini, Ross reviewed legislative happenings and other items of interest to federal retirees.

A major issue faced by the second session of the 100th U.S. Congress is the Medicare catastrophic health care legislation. NARFE is supporting two amendments in the Senate vote; one is designed to equalize the tax-base supplemental premium payments between federal retirees and Social Security recipients, and the second amendment addresses the problem of duplicate coverage under Medicare and the Federal Employees Health Benefit Program.

The January 1988 bulletin, mailed to constituents by State Rep. Sam Wolf, reviewed several bills being considered by the Illinois Legislature, as well as other governmental actions, pertaining to the safety and well-being of retired individuals.

attorney race, Bill Haine, an Allen attorney, said eyewitnesses saw Martin assemble the mobile sign on the lot at the National Store and take the tires off.

"I never built that sign. I took the wheels off it to repair the axle," Martin said.

Haine said Martin should not be working for Allen because Martin awaits sentencing on a felony charge. Allen, who could not be reached Wednesday, has said he did not seek Martin's help.

Martin said he supports all candidates, including Allen and Haine.

mented is Lehman "Lee" Krause (D), running for the Karns appellate judge vacancy. For the same post, Stephen M. Kernan (D) is not recommended. Those recommended are Charles W. "Bill" Chapman (D), formerly of Granite City, and Robert M. Keenan Jr. (R).

Lawyers do not recommend Charles J. Kolker for Illinois Supreme Court justice from the 5th Judicial District (Joseph Goldner, appellate judge vacancy). Recommended for that vacancy are Carl H. Becker (D), Horace L. Calvo, and Robert R. Hill (D), formerly of Granite City, is a former local state representative.

Donald Lowery (R) is not recommended for a new appellate judgeship. Recommended is Philip J. Barick (D), a 3rd Circuit circuit judge.

For another new appellate judge post, lawyers recommend Richard P. Goldenbersh (D) and Thomas Long (R).

Paul Riley (D) is recommended for the Johnson circuit judge vacancy in the 3rd Circuit. No republican filed.

There are no recommendations for a new 3rd Circuit position. The reason is because no one filed; write-in voting will decide the nominations. Write-in candidates include Charles Renshaw and Elizabeth Veroy.

Lawyers were asked a number of specific questions within four categories: judicial integrity, judicial temperament, legal ability and court management. Schiller said.

Fields

Fields says look at voting legitimate

Fields alleged. He said he has not ruled out the possibility of pursuing the issue with the state, however.

"We are going to look into it further," Fields said.

He expressed doubt about the seriousness of the East St. Louis Election Board's efforts.

"If they came up with a true number, there is a chance there would not be enough registered voters to justify the existence of the board. They might have to fall under county (control) like everyone else," he said.

Attorney Bill Hutto, representing the East St. Louis Election Board, said there is no law to support Fields' allegation.

"The statute states the 'electors of any city may adopt an election board,'" he said. "Nothing prohibits a board by reason of a change in population."

Dr. Katie Wright, East St. Louis Election Board commissioner, said Fields' use of the board as an issue is "gross and obscene." Wright said none of the board's investigations has resulted in a single person being jailed. She said Fields was looking for an alibi in case he lost.

"I have questioned the numbers myself," Wright said. "The school population does include students from outside the city limits. Maybe the census is wrong and missed some people. If vote fraud were proven, I would not want to put those people in jail."

"I cannot stand here in my home and say vote fraud doesn't exist," he said. "But his numbers haven't proven anything, and our numbers haven't proven anything that has sent anyone to jail. He claims to have exposed vote fraud in East St. Louis, but where is his proof?"

Describing himself as a "dyed in the wool Republican," he said Fields should be "out knocking on doors and trying to win the thing fairly."

"The whole thing smacks of racism," Wright said. "We are black, poor and easy to exploit. We have a bad reputation anyway and white voters are probably ready to believe the worst. Pete Fields is damaging the reputation of the city. I am angry. Why would I cheat for a bunch of Democrats?"

Freeman said if the state board received a complaint, the procedure would be to start an investigation.

Judge John P. Shonkwiler, Monticello, chairman of the Judicial Advisory Polls Committee, said he has been conducting for 27 years and has proven to be valuable in informing the public about candidates' qualifications.

"The poll should not be the sole criteria for voting on a candidate," Shonkwiler said. "But it should be one of the factors considered, together with the candidate's experience, ability and integrity."

"The failure of a candidate to receive a recommended rating does not reflect on the person's ability as a lawyer, but only says that lawyers answering the poll do not consider him or her a good candidate for the judicial office being sought."

Riley was voted on by 193 lawyers, the appellate candidates by 75, and the Supreme Court candidates by 77.

Overall summary scores were 90 to 100 for candidates who were strongly recommended, 70 to 89 for those recommended, 60-69 for those not recommended and 59 or below for candidates strongly not recommended.

City Temple marks 10th year Feb. 28

The City Temple of God is celebrating its 10th anniversary during the week of Feb. 28.

In 1921, a small group from North Venice decided to begin a church in their own community after they found it difficult to travel to attend meetings at 26th Street and Grand Avenue in Granite City. More than 65 years later, City Temple remains as an outreach to the Tri-City area.

The church had been located in several different places, including the old City Theater in downtown Granite City. The congregation has been worshipping in its present location at 4751 Maryville Road for 10 years.

"Many of those from the North Venice congregation still attend the church known for its family atmosphere and friendliness," a spokesman said.

The Rev. Gary Thomas invites the public to attend anniversary services.

In the opening service Sunday and the following Monday, the guest speaker will be the former pastor, the Rev. A.E. Cope. On Tuesday, March 1, and Wednesday, March 2, the guest speaker will be the former pastor, the Rev. Alan Randolph.

Music will be featured each night. Services start at 7 p.m.

zine, Ellen Douglas, Carol Harmon, Joyce Kerr, Sandy McMaisters, Mickey Patrick and Barb Rivers.

The closing prayer was given by Joyce Kerr, followed by hors d'oeuvres in Fellowship Hall.

The Methodist United Church women held their February meeting at the Nameoki Methodist Church. Hostesses were Helena Bischoff and Dorothy Luckert. Millie Clements was in charge.

The topic was "Expanding our Vision in Justice."

Helena Bischoff conducted business on a mother-daughter banquet to be held May 8. Dorothy Wallace conducted the closing prayer.

The next meeting will be March 14 in the home of Phyllis Whitehead. Alta Stewart will be co-hostess.

Traffic 'local issue' in presidential race

The politics of traffic came front and center to Campaign '88 Tuesday, courtesy of George Bush.

In a startlingly across-the-board gesture, the vice president crossed geographic, economic, religious and racial lines by commuting most of his staff to work or school.

The man who is attempting to broaden his appeal did it by shutting down parts of at least four major highways and the Solar Street Bridge during Tuesday morning's rush hour.

This successfully alienated commuters from St. Charles, the North Side, the South Side, West County and a bit of the South Side.

Driving Bush all the credit probably is not fair. The decision to go up rush hour probably was made by a "highly sought political consultant" who crawls out from under a rock every four years to teach presidential hopefuls how to get out of their loyal but square staff members and how to win over voters in states where neither one hopeful nor the consultant ever has set foot.

Tuesday's strategy was to close down I-70 about 6:30 a.m. and then gun up downtown, the approach ramps to the bridge, the area around the Anheuser-Busch brewery and Clayton. It worked.

Bush only had a limited number of precious campaign minutes to make the rounds. So what if he collectively cost commuters hundreds of thousands of hours of income while his limo rolled past unobstructed?

Now that's the kind of sensitivity and foresight I'd like to see in my next president.

Coming during rush hour wouldn't have been a bad way for Bush to become the dearly sought "man of the people." I'd have felt a bit of kinship with the veep if he'd spent an hour or two cooling his vice presidential heels in traffic. Then he could have ambled on down to the brewery to knock down a couple of long links before breakfast, Texas-style, with the boys on the line.

Martin on the Metro

By Pat Martin

Now that would be a man of the people, and would help whittle away his wimp image to boot.

Bush's visit has serious implications: What if every time Bush comes to town to visit his brother Bucky, he decides to come in at 7 a.m.?

We haven't had to worry about that with Ronald Reagan. He doesn't have any close relatives living here and, even if he did, Reagan's never up by then anyway.

What about Richard Gephardt? If he were elected, would they call out the militia, the Secret Service and the National Guard to shut down the South Side every time he comes back to his mom's for a home-cooked meal? Would they disturb the serenity of the neighborhood by blaring "Hail to the Chief" in Polka time?

These are weighty issues to consider before making our choices on Super Tuesday.

The smart candidate will be one who follows an opponent's rush hour visit with an opposite approach and slogan.

"Vote for Jones. I'll only visit at noon."

Mansfield best qualified

To the editor:

From my perspective as an assistant to Cong. Mel Price, it seems clear that Mike Mansfield is the best candidate for Congress among the men running. Mike is qualified. Mike is honest. And Mike best represents the values of this district.

During a recent radio interview, Pete Fields told listeners he didn't know how to get a bill through Congress. When does he plan to learn? Most people learn about the legislative process in their 9th-grade government classes. Is it too much to ask of a candidate to learn the responsibilities of an office before attempting to run for it? It's good they don't have tests for candidates: Pete would have failed.

I don't mean to be too critical of Fields, but I'm still wondering about the $19,000 he gave Mayor Carl Officer of East St. Louis. During the 1986 primary, Officer endorsed Fields over Mel Price.

I couldn't believe someone from East St. Louis had turned back on Mel Price. When this office asked why, Officer in effect said: "It's something I've got to do." In my mind, Pete Fields paid Carl Officer for an endorsement.

Ferry Costello — all I know about Costello is that he picks and chooses judges, gets large contributions from liability lawyers, and all his friends seem to benefit from taxpayers' money. That's enough to tell me not to vote for him.

Mansfield is the best candidate. I'll vote for him. I owe it the legacy Mel Price is leaving behind.

INF Treaty only one step

To the editor:

Recently, the Senate Armed Services Committee, of which I am a member, began a series of hearings to consider the ratification of the Intermediate Nuclear Forces Treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Although I am pleased at the negotiation and signing of this historic treaty with the Soviet Union, it must not stand alone.

This treaty is a good first step in what ultimately must be a four-step process to bring about true, verified arms control and lasting peace between the United States and the Soviet Union.

These hearings will explore every possible ramification resulting from this agreement and serve as a guide to our negotiating team in the ensuing push for strategic, chemical and conventional arms treaties.

The INF Treaty would require the United States to destroy 850 missiles and the Soviet Union 1,900. The agreement provides for the destruction of all missiles with ranges between 300 and 3,000 miles, along with their launchers and support equipment.

To ensure verification of this treaty, both countries may conduct inspections beginning 60 days after enactment of the treaty.

Provisions of the treaty also require an inventory of all designated sites to verify, through on-site and eyeball inspections, that all banned equipment and weaponry has been removed and destroyed.

The treaty will further require an inspection team to be stationed full-time at the final missile assembly plants of both nations for 13 years.

Senate consideration of the treaty is of unquestionable importance, and I must stress the undeniable consequences ratification and implementation of this treaty will have on the NATO alliance and our capability to maintain a credible deterrent in Europe.

The removal of NATO intermediate missiles will force us to, once again, rely on U.S. land and submarine-based missiles.

I believe there is no question NATO's deterrent capability is reduced through this treaty. The question I will be trying to answer by the conclusion of these hearings will be: How far has this deterrent been reduced?

Our NATO allies have historically relied on nuclear weapons as an option in the event of a Soviet attack which cannot be checked or defeated conventionally.

Our conventional forces in Western Europe are considered by some of our allies as simply a nuclear tripwire. Our allies point to our strategic nuclear forces and our battlefield nuclear forces as a viable deterrent.

Today the Soviet Union maintains enormous advantages in conventional weaponry and troops that must be considered.

NATO's conventional forces are not the only problem related to the treaty. In fact, our own defense industrial base has been deteriorating before our very eyes. The ability of our armed forces to fight anywhere in the world, for a reasonable period of time, is only a dream.

It is imperative that we pass a defense industrial program for the United States during the 100th Congress that restores our defense capability.

Bathon for county auditor

Fred Bathon deserves to be Madison County's next auditor.

Bathon, 33, Madison, is more than just the "hometown boy."

Bathon is city treasurer in Madison.

Bathon has seven years of experience as Madison County's chief deputy auditor.

Bathon is a former special agent for the U.S. Department of the Treasury, Internal Revenue Service.

Bathon has a degree in business administration from Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. Bathon is, in short, far and away the best qualified man for the job.

Bathon clearly stated the importance of having a county auditor who has experience in the job. "A new county auditor familiar with the complex financial information systems and programs I helped develop could have extreme difficulty maintaining the timely flow of data and statistics."

Bathon is endorsed by the Madison County Democratic Party Central Committee. In the Democratic Party primary March 15, give him your support, too.

Pick Women of Achievement

The women in our area deserve recognition and there is a way they can get it.

Nominations for the Suburban Journals "Women of Achievement" contest are being taken through Monday, Feb. 29. The real spirit of Women of Achievement calls for honoring women who are otherwise unheralded for the work they do in the community, people who give of themselves, of their time and energies to help others, people who we believe you know and should nominate for the honor.

If you know women in the community who contribute above and beyond the normal call of duty, submit their names in nomination.

Past winners in our area are Lillian Green with Granite City Steel, Sister Mary Thomas at St. Elizabeth Medical Center and Dr. Felicia Koch, physician. Their contributions to our community have been recognized and we believe it is time for others to also be counted for the work they've done on behalf of others.

Nominations for the honor will result in the selection of 10 women. Winners will be announced Wednesday, April 13, in the Suburban Journals and on KMOX radio. They will be honored at a luncheon May 9 at the Adam's Mark Hotel in downtown St. Louis.

To nominate a woman for the distinction of being a "Woman of Achievement," type or neatly write a letter of nomination with the nominator's name and telephone number. The letter should include the nominee's address and phone number, and the reason for the nomination. An elaborate presentation is unnecessary.

Send letters of nomination to:

Tourists journeying here

When you think of vacation time, do you think about going to Hollywood, Malibu or maybe a Florida beach? Many do, but latest available statistics show Illinois is making waves itself, without the benefit of a nearby ocean.

Travel-generated employment is estimated at 152,100 in this state, exceeding the number of such jobs in all the surrounding states — 109,300 in Wisconsin, 91,500 in Missouri, 69,700 in Indiana, 51,600 in Iowa and 47,900 in Kentucky.

California leads in annual domestic travel spending, attracting $32 billion, and Florida is second with $18 billion, followed by New York with $16 billion, Texas with $15 billion, New Jersey with $12 billion and Pennsylvania with $9 billion. But Illinois ranks seventh in the nation with $8.662 billion, topping Michigan's $7 billion, Nevada's and Ohio's $6 billion each and the other 40 states.

In addition, Illinois' most recently tabulated yearly travel expenditure gain was 11 percent, matching Pennsylvania and exceeded only by Michigan's 14 percent and California's and New Jersey's 13 percent increases.

Tourism is alive and well in Illinois and in Metro East, where it is predicted that the unique Cahokia Mounds Historic Site museum now well under construction will provide a major stimulus.

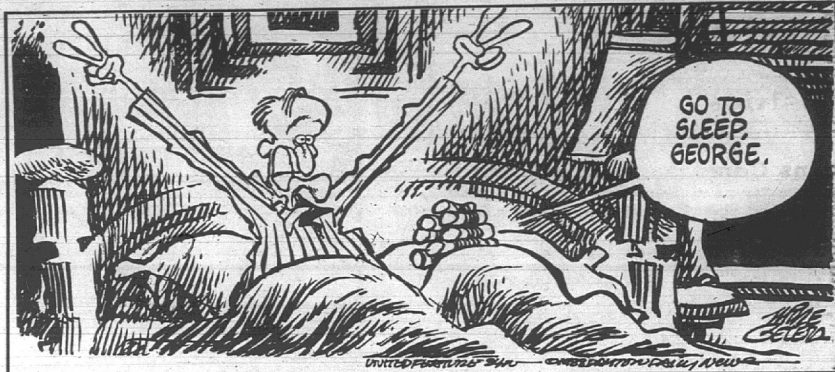

'Olympic' steel competition

"In the crucial year of 1987 when we were scrambling for survival, our slogan was 'Break even or better in 1987.' This year we are much more optimistic. 'Reach for the stars' aptly defines the corporation's challenging plans and goals for 1988 and the 1988-92 strategic plan."

These words by Bill Swanson, Granite City Steel vice president and general manager, provide encouragement as employees work as a team in a kind of worldwide "Olympics," competing in efficiency, customer service and product quality.

Net income was $48 million last year, compared to a $60 million net loss in 1986. For 1988 and beyond, the targets include expanded shipments and marketing, plus equipment modernization and improved yield.

Alderman opposes endorsement

To the editor:

I read two articles in the Feb. 18 Press-Record about one of the mayors who states he must support Costello because he is worried about a trillion dollar debt and a trade imbalance. All of this is true, as we all know, because we do read the papers. But this mayor is passing up a chance for us to have a congressman from Madison County.

This same mayor does have a right to his choice and he told all of the readers of this paper once again he is for Jerry Costello. Oh yes, Costello.

This mayor stated in another part of the same issue that Costello has a better record than Fields. It all depends on what kind of records you talk about.

I read in three different papers that some judges in St. Clair County can help this mayor come up with some of the records.

This same mayor says he knows of no record Pete Fields holds other than auditor of Madison County. This is where my story begins. I remember a very great man who never made it out of grade school, had no education at all and by no means had great records.

This man from Madison went on to become a well-known person, because this same mayor looked up to him. I have been at the man's house when the mayor came to him and called on him for his help many times.

Remember, Mr. Mayor, no record or education. He became an alderman and a precinct committeeman in Madison. He became the Democratic Central Committee chairman in Madison County, and also the head supervisor years ago at the Granite City Drivers License Division.

Later, he became "Mr. Democrat of Madison County." This same man from nowhere started me in politics. You well know that if your friends and their families did not get behind you because they liked your style or how you talked to them, you would not be where you are today. It takes friends and their families to get us all elected in politics.

But you must remember, Mr. Mayor, some of us out here do think that Pete Fields is the right man for the job. Let's just say Pete Fields is a good old boy who cares about people in Venice, Madison and Granite City.

No, he doesn't have $430,000 to buy his way into some hearts. He only has people that will vote for the good old boy.

I am speaking for a lot of people who wanted to answer you, but the paper probably couldn't have printed all the names. The people may do it later through a paid ad: "Yes, I support Pete Fields."

Alderman, Madison Ward 2

Says Costello administers poorly

To the editor:

I have just read that the mayors of Madison, Venice and Granite City have endorsed Jerry Costello as our next congressman. They state the reason for their selection was his administrative experience and this is the issue I wish to address.

Rep. Price's offices have always given his constituents quick and effective solutions to their problems. They have always been efficient and more than cooperative. However, there is no way to describe how inefficiently the St. Clair County offices are run.

I have personally known people who found the county departments so uncooperative that they have had to travel to Springfield to obtain the documents they needed. These people were county residents; they paid for their county government but apparently their county government refused to work for them.

This can only mean that the county office workers are inefficient or that the administration is not doing its job; either way this sort of problem can only reflect badly on the administration, an administration that Mr. Costello heads.

Rep. Price's offices have been administered exceptionally well by Mike Mansfield. If there is a candidate to be elected for his administrative ability, it should be him.

Another important element to be considered is integrity. A good administrator must make many non-partisan choices in his job. Rep. Price has always felt this way, and Mr. Mansfield seems to be just as committed to non-partisan leadership. One only needs to look at Mr. Costello's record to see how he feels regarding this issue.

I therefore find it very hard to understand. One can only hope they can explain their choice more thoroughly to their constituents.

Oops. Bush motorcade one too long

Security was certainly tight for the parade of Vice President George Bush through St. Louis during rush-hour Tuesday. At least it was supposed to be there, to the absolute horror of the driver.

The Suburban Journal newspapers have "runners," intra-company couriers who provide for quick distribution of advertising and other information from one Suburban Journal newspaper to another.

One of these runners happened to be on U.S. 40 near Interstate 170 when the Bush parade was about to begin. The hapless fellow didn't know what was going on and figured all the cars were there blocking the road because of a big wreck (and perhaps Dole and some Democrats would think his first guess was correct).

The policeman stopped the runner and asked, "Press?" The runner, taking the question to mean, "Do you work for a newspaper?" responded, "Yeah."

The policeman came back, presumably after checking the vehicle, and asked, "Suburban Journal?" The runner said, "Yeah."

"Stay behind the car," the policeman responded. So the runner got behind the police car and began to follow it, not sure of what was happening until he flipped the radio and heard that a motorcade for Bush was causing traffic problems.

Then the runner figured it out. "When I heard it was for Bush, I got out as fast as I could. I was scared to death ... It did freak me out."

He's still nervous — "This (article) isn't going to get me in trouble or nothing?" I assured him it shouldn't, but added I didn't plan to use his name since he was obviously upset about what had happened.

The runner was treated to a first-hand example of the power of the press, or the power of being assumed to be a reporter.

The moral, if any, is to wear clean underwear because you never know when you're going to be in a motorcade, or something like that.

STOCK MARKET GAME: A team of students from Granite City High School won first place in stock market competition sponsored by the Center for Economic Education at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville. During a 10-week period, students were able to invest up to $100,000 (on paper) in stocks they had chosen, with the option of changing their portfolio every two weeks. The Granite City team members parlayed it into $127,000. Left to right are Mel Bunting, teacher and team sponsor, and Mike Reed, Mike Scaturro, David Hunt, Ron Laboray and John Sharp, assistant director of the SUE Center for Economic Education. The purpose of the game was to teach students about the American economy, high finance, and stock market operations.

US/Canada trade pact to boost Illinois economy

By Cabell Bruce
P-R/J Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — The proposed United States-Canada trade pact, which supporters say will spur Illinois economic development if ratified, received a boost Monday when 20 governors endorsed the agreement.

The action took place at the National Governors' Association Committee on International Trade and Foreign Relations. "The Free Trade Agreement will have a huge beneficial impact on Illinois," said Gov. James R. Thompson, who is attending his 22nd National Governors' Association meeting.

"The agreement will enable Illinois to export agricultural products, food processing products and spare auto parts to Canada duty free."

President Ronald Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney signed the Free Trade Agreement in January. Congress now must ratify the pact.

Currently, Canadian tariffs are double what American tariffs are, according to Thompson. Some of the tariffs will be ended immediately, while others will be lifted over five- and 10-year periods.

"This agreement will also assure Illinois has access to Canadian energy supplies, and in the financial sector will permit Illinois banks to purchase Canadian banks," Thompson said.

Thompson, the longest-serving governor in the country, said the pact could be an economic shot-in-the-arm for Illinois small businesses and encourage them to export their products more aggressively in Canada.

"If they do well in Canada, they'll then be able to start exporting to countries in the Pacific Rim and Europe which are much more difficult," the governor said.

Also during his visit here, Thompson plans to meet with the Illinois congressional delegation to lobby its members to support full funding for the proposed Superconducting Super Collider.

Thompson said the governor of a neighboring state will come out in support of Illinois' SSC bid next week, but refused to say who that would be. An aide said it will be Gov. Robert D. Orr of Indiana.

By endorsing Illinois' bid for the massive federal project, Orr will join Govs. Terry E. Branstad of Iowa and Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin in supporting the state's application for the SSC.

"Hopefully they can help Illinois obtain the SSC by lobbying their congressional delegations," said David Fields, the Illinois governor's press secretary. "The idea is what helps Illinois will help Iowa and Wisconsin and other midwestern states," Fields said.

Thompson said he would meet with several other governors at a roundtable gathering to discuss lobbying strategies for the proposed atom smasher.

"We obviously need Congress to appropriate the $663 million in SSC funding that Reagan requested in his budget request for fiscal year 1989," Thompson said.

Illinois, which has already spent $4.4 million on lobbying efforts for SSC, is one of seven states still being considered by the Department of Energy for the SSC.

If constructed, the $4.4 billion project will be the world's largest nuclear particle accelerator, a 33-mile tunnel in circumference buried 100 feet underground, in which beams of protons will be smashed into each other at energies 20 times those now possible. The process will allow scientists to study the fundamental nature of matter and could lead to dramatic energy breakthroughs.

Ask Mr. Meltzer

By Bernard Meltzer

'Clever' broker's idea called criminal offense

Dear Mr. Meltzer: I want to buy a house. My problem is I only have a few thousand dollars saved even though my income is over $70,000 per year. We just can't seem to be able to save money.

So a "clever" broker came up with an idea. The property was for sale for $175,000. The broker said we will draw up a sales agreement of $225,000 and show a $50,000 down payment. The balance will come from a $175,000 mortgage that we will get from the bank.

It seems like a very clever way to buy a property without cash. What do you think of this?

Answer: The result could be that you would end up in jail and the broker would be disbarred from his profession.

It is true that certain questionable publications talk about this scheme as a way to buy without cash, but it is illegal. You are giving false information to induce the bank to give you an unjustified loan, and that is a criminal offense.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: When the real estate agent looked over my property, he said, "We shall have no trouble getting $160,000." I thought this was too high, but I signed the listing agreement.

After four months, when we finally sold the property, it went for $130,000. Of course, I'm angry. Is there anything I can go?

Answer: I don't think there is. What you describe falls into the category of "sales puffery."

It is common in the industry for real estate agents to take a listing in excess of what they think they can get, because otherwise they find not too many owners will give them a listing.

Dear Mr. Meltzer: My wife and I now are retired. The kids have gone and the house is too big. So we bought some land and decided to build a smaller house.

But we cannot build it because the zoning specifies that the house must have a first-floor area of at least 1,800 square feet. The specified area is much too large.

The house we have in mind fits our needs very well and only has 1,200 square feet. The township will not issue a building permit to us. They say no. What do you say?

Answer: I say that if you are prepared to fight and spend the necessary money, you probably can win. The kind of zoning involved here only can be justified based upon health, safety and the public welfare.

Unless you have unusual ground conditions such as water or sewerage problems, a 1,200-square-foot house meets the criteria as well as an 1,800-square-foot house.

Earnings report may be used for planning tool

By Oliver M. Holmes
District manager,
Social Security

Beneficiaries who worked last year and earned over the Social Security annual earnings limit are required to file an annual report of earnings with Social Security by April 15.

You should take the time to use this report for one of the things it is designed to be — a planning tool that permits you to work and receive Social Security benefits painlessly and profitably.

The report is completed to show how much you earned last year and how much you expect to earn the current year. Social Security then adjusts your benefits to reflect your estimate.

Problems occur when people earn more than they estimate and fail to report it to Social Security so that their benefits can be adjusted to reflect the increased earnings. The result is that they receive more benefits than they are entitled to — an overpayment.

The law requires that overpayments be paid back. Generally, this is accomplished through deductions from future benefits, but it may be repaid in a lump sum.

In any case, the process can be painful to people who rely on Social Security benefits as their primary source of income after they stop working.

When making an estimate of earnings, a person should consider such things as cost-of-living increases, potential raises, tips, etc.

Employees should note that the amount that must be reported is gross earnings, not take-home pay. For self-employed persons, the amount that must be reported is net income after deducting business expenses.

Any change in earnings should be reported as soon as possible to avoid overpayments. Changes may be reported by telephone, mail, or in person to the East St. Louis Social Security office.

Failure to file an annual earnings report may require a person to pay a monetary penalty.

NICHOLS FIELD: Planes look almost forgotten at the Nichols Restricted Landing Area on Illinois 111 near Horseshoe Lake. Granite City Mayor Von Dee Cruse said he would welcome it into the city should that prove possible. The field is presently within the limits of Pontoon Beach but William Nichols, its owner, said he has filed suit against the village of Pontoon Beach to force a de-annexation that he said had been promised. Nichols said he would not fight annexation by Granite City.

Consumer tips

By Nell F. Hartigan
Illinois attorney general

Q. I recently discovered an error on my statement from a large department store. What kind of procedure should I follow to ensure the error will be corrected?

A. If you want to be protected under the law, you should send a separate written notice from a large department store. What kind of procedure should I follow to ensure the error will be corrected?

Most creditors will provide addresses as to where notices should be sent. Your letter must include your name and account number, a statement to the effect that you believe the bill contains a billing error, the amount involved, and the reasons why you believe there is a mistake.

The credit department of the store must then acknowledge your letter within 30 days of receipt, unless the problem is resolved within that time.

During this time, you may be required to pay any part of the bill which is not disputed and the accompanying finance charge.

While you are in settlement procedures, the creditor may not take any legal or other action to collect the amount in dispute, and your account cannot be limited or restricted in any way.

Q. I am a senior citizen and I would like to know how I can receive home energy assistance.

A. Senior citizens, as well as anyone who is considered to be in a low-income household, can receive assistance in paying home energy bills by applying through the Illinois Home Energy Assistance Program.

For a two-person household, the maximum income allowable for the past three months would be $2,313. A single-person household could have a maximum income of $1,719 for the three-month period.

Smith earns less money

A.O. Smith Corp. has reported net earnings applicable to common stock for 1987 of $14.8 million or $1.74 per fully diluted share on sales of $970 million. Earnings from continuing operations, which exclude the favorable impact of a $3 million accounting change related to lower income tax rates, were $11.8 million or $1.39 per fully diluted share. In 1986, continuing operations earned $22.5 million or $2.53 on sales of $911 million. Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Thomas J. Dolan cited competitive pricing in all the company's major markets, new product and facility start-up costs, and lower volume for passenger car components as the reasons for the earnings decline. Structural components for the Taurus and Sable autos are made by Smith at its Granite City plant.

Fourth-quarter sales by the corporation from continuing operations were $236 million versus $231 million for the same quarter of 1986. Continuing earnings of $1.1 million or 13 cents per fully diluted share compared with $5.3 million or 59 cents for the same quarter of 1986.

For the Automotive Products Co. in 1987, sales declined modestly from the year before, largely due to weak demand for passenger cars and the phase-out of production of full-length frames for General Motors intermediate-size passenger cars. The decline in passenger structure volume more than offset strong sales for full-length frames for light trucks and components for heavy trucks.

College bonds reported sold out

Illinois College Savings Bonds totaling $60 million were issued Jan. 12 in $5,000 increments and sold out within two days. Yield ranged from 6.3 percent for bonds due in 1993, which sold at a price of $70.58 per $1,000 face value, to 7.9 percent for bonds due in 2008, which sold at $204.13 per $1,000. The college savings bonds do not pay interest before maturity. Instead, they are sold at discounts from face value and the investor's return is realized when the bonds are redeemed. Additional interest in the form of a grant is payable to the holder attends a qualified Illinois institution or college. Edward D. Jones & Co., which has more than 1,300 one-person offices located in communities nationwide, was a co-manager of the bond issue. The firm provides conservative investment counseling to individual investors.

The Granite City Edward D. Jones & Co. representative is Dennis Nobbe, whose office is located at 2133 Johnson Road. The tax-exempt college bonds are designed to help Illinois residents meet future college education costs.

"One of the reasons Jones was asked to be a co-manager of this bond issue is our network of offices throughout Illinois," said Spencer Burke of Jones' Investment Banking Department.

"With more than 100 Illinois offices, Jones represents 86 percent of all brokerage firm offices in the state." The bond issue was underwritten by First National Bank of Chicago and six co-managers.

"This is really a great investment in that it is good for those individuals planning for their children's future education needs," said Burke.

"We have been encouraging other states to structure similar programs. Apparently, there is a shortage of high-quality, tax-exempt bonds, which are appropriate investment vehicles for college savings."

IPAC seeks insurance regulations

By Bill Milligan

CAHOKIA — A statewide consumer group called for tighter regulation of the state's insurance industry during a Feb. 16 press conference at St. Louis Downtown Parks Airport. State Rep. Wyvett Young and representatives of the Illinois Public Action Council attacked what they call excessive insurance industry profits last year.

John Cameron, associate director of IPAC, said insurance industry profits increased from $1.9 billion in 1985 to an estimated $3.7 billion in 1987. Cameron cited A.M. Best Co., a Florida-based company that rates insurance companies as his source for that information.

"In 1986, the insurance companies said there was an insurance crisis and began raising rates to everyone," Cameron said. "Since then, they have recorded record profits. Illinois is one of three states that doesn't regulate the insurance industry."

"We think they should be able to justify insurance rate increases, and we're proposing fair rate regulations," Cameron said.

Bob Schultz, a spokesman for the Illinois Insurance Information Service in Chicago, said regulation might not equal lower insurance rates. "There are 848 companies licensed to sell property and casualty insurance in this state," Schultz said. "Of them, only 146 are based in Illinois. If we start regulating them, there is no guarantee those companies won't pull out all together."

Schultz said A.M. Best Co.'s report also found that insurance rates in Illinois were going down and not up.

"They don't expect to see any insurance rate increases at all," Schultz said. "They're (IPAC) saying there is an insurance crisis. I don't see any."

Cameron said insurance payments have begun to account for about 12 percent of the average family's income.

"That's twice what we pay for utility rates," Cameron said. "Behind our homes and food, insurance is the most expensive thing anyone else has."

IPAC called for full disclosure of insurance rates and payoffs. "We want to see more for insurance than anything else."

Democracy continues march forward

By Richard L. Leisher
U.S. Chamber president

"Democracy," E.B. White wrote, "is the recurrent suspicion that more than half the people are right more than half the time."

As such it is at best a most fragile form of government, dependent on the civility and self-restraint of individual citizens, ever vulnerable to erratic winds of blind emotion and heedless self-interest. In recent years, we have watched as several nations groped painfully toward democracy: the Philippines, Haiti and, more recently, South Korea. In each case, progress has come haltingly and the results remain uncertain.

The agony these nations are going through should come as a sobering reminder to us that this system we take for granted and routinely recommend to the rest of the world is not ours by divine right, not is it guaranteed in perpetuity. We enjoy it today because our ancestors fought and sacrificed for it yesterday. Our children will enjoy it tomorrow only if we honor our heritage and continue the struggle.

The challenges to democracy appear in many forms. Sometimes the danger is stark and open, as when enemy troops loom on the horizon and seek to conquer us by force. On many occasions we have been required to withstand such assaults.

Sometimes the threat is more subtle — as in a linguistic battle over the meaning of the word democracy. For example, many communist nations tout themselves as "Democratic Republics" when they are nothing of the kind.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev speaks proudly of full employment in the Soviet Union, but that is a poor substitute for democracy. If the people do not have the right to remove their government, they are not free and no amount of verbal gymnastics will alter that grim fact.

But the greatest threat to democracy comes not from abroad, but from within. It is the danger of armed armor or communist doubletalk: It comes from within.

As we must be vigilant against foreign enemies, so we must also be alert to our own foibles and weaknesses. Every demand for special treatment and access to the public treasury must rightly be considered an assault on the fabric of our democracy.

Such assaults weaken our government and the pounding has been growing louder and louder.

IRA still best tax-free retirement investment

By Bob Hardcastle
Investment adviser

In the early 1980s Uncle Sam gave us the only true tax-free retirement program — the Individual Retirement Account, IRA.

Although the deductibility of the IRA was changed somewhat in 1986 by tax reform, the IRA still is the best all-around tax-free retirement program the working public ever has been offered by our elected representatives in Washington, D.C. Money placed in an IRA accumulates on a tax-deferred basis, which simply means that money the investor leaves in the account is not taxed while it is accumulating.

This is different from most investments, where the investor is paying taxes each year on the amount the investment is accumulating. In some cases, capital gains taxes are even paid on investments that may have incurred a net asset loss for the year.

Single persons who work and make less than $35,000 a year may invest up to $2,000 each year in their IRA account and deduct in full the amount on their taxes. If they make less than $35,000, a lesser percentage of their income is deductible on a sliding scale.

A married couple filing a joint return may deduct up to $4,000 if earning less than $40,000 and a portion of the investment will be deductible if the joint taxable income is less than $50,000 annually.

If husband and wife work, each can place up to $2,000 a year in an IRA. If only one spouse works, the couple is allowed to place up to $2,500 in IRAs. This includes contributions of $2,000 and $250, either of which can be placed in the IRA account of the non-working spouse.

Many people erroneously think the only money they can put in an IRA is the amount prescribed under the federal guidelines regulating annual contributions. That is not the case. Workers have retirement programs, pension plans, profit-sharing plans and other benefit programs that, upon retirement or when leaving a job, can be rolled over or transferred into an IRA.

Always check with a financial planner or accountant to determine if a rollover would be beneficial. No taxes will have to be paid on money that is rolled over into an IRA within 60 days of the time the investor receives the money.

All or part of the money in an IRA can be pulled out of an IRA without tax penalties starting at the age of 59½. IRA withdrawals must begin by age 70½. There is a 10 percent tax penalty for taking money out of an IRA before the age of 59½.

Riddles, pizza, bended knee: 'Will you marry me?'

By Gary King
Staff writer

Diane Buchanan was asked how her husband, Kevin, "popped" the question of marriage to her.

"He asked me to marry him in Pizza Hut," said Mrs. Buchanan, who was married Sept. 12. "We had already picked out the rings, so we were like 'OK, let's go.' And then one night in Pizza Hut, he grabbed my hand under the table and gave me my ring. I'd like to at least say we were engaged over pizza, but we weren't. We were engaged under pizza."

Kevin Buchanan's method of popping the question hardly seems traditional, but the only thing predictable about marriage proposals is their unpredictability.

Ask Vivian Barrios, who was forced to work for her proposal by her hubby-to-be, Ron.

"He made me this box, and it had riddles and clues and padlocks in it," said Mrs. Barrios, who was married Oct. 4, 1986. "I had to figure out all the clues and riddles to find the key for the box. Finally, when I found the key and opened the box, it had my engagement ring in it. My parents and grandparents were there to watch it. It was unique, but it's something I'll never forget."

Mrs. Barrios was engaged Feb. 14, Valentine's Day, a day that is to wedding proposals what Santa Claus is to Christmas. And at least two area women have fond yuletide memories.

Debby and Mike Becherer's engagement, for instance, became official Dec. 24, 1986.

"He (Mike) got down on his knees, gave me a long-stemmed red rose and my engagement ring on Christmas Eve," said Mrs. Becherer, who was married Sept. 12. "I guess he was just praying that I'd say 'yes.'"

Local insurance agent Cheryl Crawford says she was "caught off-guard" by her husband of 16 years, Don.

"It was Christmas morning, I opened my gift, and it was an engagement ring," said Mrs. Crawford, who was married Sept. 18, 1971. "I had no idea it was coming, but I still made him get down on his knees and ask me."

Cyndee and Charlie Maurer's engagement did not become official on a holiday, but still came as a surprise to the June 26 bride.

"We were just sitting in his apartment watching TV, and he came over to me and said 'You're going to hate to hear this, but will you marry me?'" Mrs. Maurer said. "I had no idea that question was coming, but it didn't matter. It was still real special to me."

Wilma and Ellis Herring's engagement of more than 41 years held the possibility that her fiancée might not return home from World War II. Herring did return from the war, and the couple was married Oct. 31, 1946.

"It was scary to think he might not come back, but I guess that's something that you just can't think about," Mrs. Herring said. "All we knew was that he was going in the service, and so he asked me to marry him when he got back."

Betty and Mac Warfield's engagement was also prompted by Uncle Sam.

"Mac had just come home from boot camp, and he was getting ready to leave again," said Mrs. Warfield, who was married Oct. 7, 1952. "He just said 'let's get married.'"

Debby Franko said one of the things she most remembers about her engagement is that her husband, Jim, stuck to a somewhat fleeting tradition in going about their engagement.

"Basically, it was just an ordinary engagement, but Jim did ask my mom and dad if he could marry me, and I think that's real special," said Mrs. Franko, who was married on Valentine's Day in 1987.

Randy Cann also broke an engagement tradition when he proposed to his wife, Stephanie.

"It was just a typical engagement, except he didn't get down on his knees to propose to me," said Stephanie Cann, who was married July 26, 1986. "He gave me my ring while we were sitting in his car."

John and Lisa Muich's engagement also had an informal ring about it.

"We just decided to get married, so we bought the rings and we were engaged," said Lisa Muich, who was married Sept. 27, 1986.

Newlyweds Tammy and Daren DePew were married Jan. 30, but the road to engagement was a long and winding one.

"We went steady for seven years," Mrs. DePew said. "And I don't even remember the first time we talked about getting married. I guess you could just say it was sort of a built-in thing."

Greater formality takes lead in summer looks for groom

By Lucyann Boston
Staff affiliate

Greater formality will be apparent in spring and summer weddings and that trend will have an impact on what the men of the hour will be wearing.

"Things will be very traditional," said Debbie Schroeder, executive assistant for Castelli Tuxedo Rental & Sales in St. Louis. "We're going to be seeing a lot of black, white and every shade of gray imaginable from silver to charcoal."

For daytime weddings, etiquette dictates a classic black cutaway or stroller with striped trousers. Late afternoon and evening weddings usually call for a tuxedo in one of a number of stylings unless the bride is pulling out all the stops, then it is white tie and tails.

When etiquette permits a choice of shirt, wing collar shirts will be more likely to be worn by the men in the bridal party than shirts with traditional collars, Schroeder said.

For those who might want something a little different, Schroeder suggested what Castelli's calls a spread-down collar, which is a cross between a traditional and a wing collar.

The popularity of wing collar shirts also has led to a slightly different tuxedo design—one with a satin stand-up collar that folds softly into flared notch lapels—for the young man who wants his ensemble to have a subtle distinction, according to the manufacturers of Pierre Cardin tuxedos.

While the basic colors of the ensembles worn by the groom and his attendants will be conservative, bridal experts see color sneaking into men's wardrobes in the form of colored cummerbunds and ties, which are coordinated with the colors worn by the women in the bridal party.

"We have ties and cummerbunds in 70 different colors," Schroeder said. "If you can't find a color to match the dresses, we'll do our best to find one for you."

Even though there is not as much fuss made over the groom, as the date for the wedding draws close there are still a number of things he should do to get through the big day in top form, according to Harvey Weinstein, president of Lord West Formals and a leading formal-wear authority.

The following is a list of Weinstein's do's and don't's for the groom.

- Visit your favorite hairstylist about a week before the wedding for the "works." That way you avoid the fresh-clipped look on the day of the wedding.

- Maintain your daily physical fitness routine and despite the temptations, don't eat or drink excessively.

- No one is perfect. Review with your best man his responsibilities to avoid any last minute hitches.

- Don't forget to assign someone the task of returning your formal wear to the rental store while you are on your honeymoon.

BEADING, IRIDESCENCE and slimmer lines highlight 1988 bridal trends for spring and summer. This dress from the Piccione Signature Collection for Alfred Angelo features an opulently hand-beaded bodice of re-embroidered Alençon lace, which gives way to a taffeta skirt and semicathedral train.

Wedding customs make moment

By Donna Kimbro
Staff writer

Wedding ceremony customs vary in different churches and some customs have been abandoned through the years; however, to the bridal couple this is the most important event in their lives.

In the 1970s, the trend was for couples to write their own ceremonies, with the permission of the church pastor, but now most couples have returned to a more traditional ceremony.

The Rev. Nerses Manoogian, pastor of St. Gregory The Illuminator Armenian Apostolic Church, 1732 Maple St., said the tradition about 75 to 100 years ago was for a priest to visit the home of the bride to bless the wedding gown prior to the ceremony. This is no longer observed, but at the time was of great importance to the bride and her family.

Manoogian said, in the Armenian church, the blessing of the rings begins the Canon of Sacrament of Holy Matrimony. After the blessing, the couple exchanges rings. A Scripture reading and hymns follow.

Another segment of the religious ceremony is blessing of two crowns by the priest, who then places the crowns on the heads of the bridal couple, who wear them during the wedding service. Special hymns are sung to the couple as they are recognized king and queen for their day in church. At this interval, the priest speaks of the importance of the tasks expected of the partners in the church.

The crowns are later removed and remain in the church for future weddings.

Another part of the ceremony involves the blessing of the wine before a Biblical passage is read, which describes the miracle of Jesus turning water into wine. In this memory, the couple and priest sip wine.

The bride is always escorted into the church by her father. If he has died, a brother or first cousin performs the duty.

In the Roman Catholic church, wedding ceremonies for many years had to be performed before noon. The bridal party and family members then attended a breakfast, visited during the day and in the evening hosted a reception.

Famous to show spring fashions

"Spring Style '88," a spring fashion show-seminar featuring Suanne Clark, merchandise editor of "Vogue" magazine, will be held from noon to 1:30 p.m. Feb. 25, 26 and 27 at three different Famous-Barr stores. The events will benefit three St. Louis charities. Reservations are required for each show, and tickets are $7.50.

On Feb. 25, Clark will present the latest for spring with special hints from the pages of "Vogue," at Famous-Barr West County in the Mauretania Room. A light luncheon with wine will be served during the presentation.

Proceeds from the event will benefit Boys Hope, a program for troubled boys. Reservation checks should be made payable to Famous-Barr Co., but mailed to Jesuit Program for Living and Learning, in care of Judy Luepke, 4970 Oakland Ave., St. Louis, 63110.

Seating is limited and tickets will be held at the door. For additional information, call 531-3063.

The seminar on Feb. 26 will be in the Hanley Room at Clayton Famous and will benefit the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation. Checks should be mailed to Juvenile Diabetes Foundation, in care of Jan Erdman, 8001 Clayton Road, St. Louis, 63117. Tickets will be held at the door. For information, call 726-2006 between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m.

The third charity to benefit from the "Vogue" "Spring Style '88" show will be the AMC Cancer Research Center. The luncheon will be held in the auditorium of Famous-Barr Downtown, 9th Floor. Reservation can be made by sending checks to AMC Cancer Research, St. Louis Council of Auxiliaries, in care of Suzanne Gilden, 1525 Orchard Lakes Drive, St. Louis, 63146. For additional information, call Gloria at 434-4372.

Wardrobe-building techniques are Clark's specialty, and she will provide plenty of useful information. She is a working wife and has strong interests in antiques and entertaining. She also is a firm believer in every woman finding her own personal style.

70 years and counting ...

The Stegelmeyers

By Bill Winter
and Donna Kimbro
Staff writers

Seventy years have left undimmed the love shared by Lawrence and Amelia (Klug) Stegelmeyer.

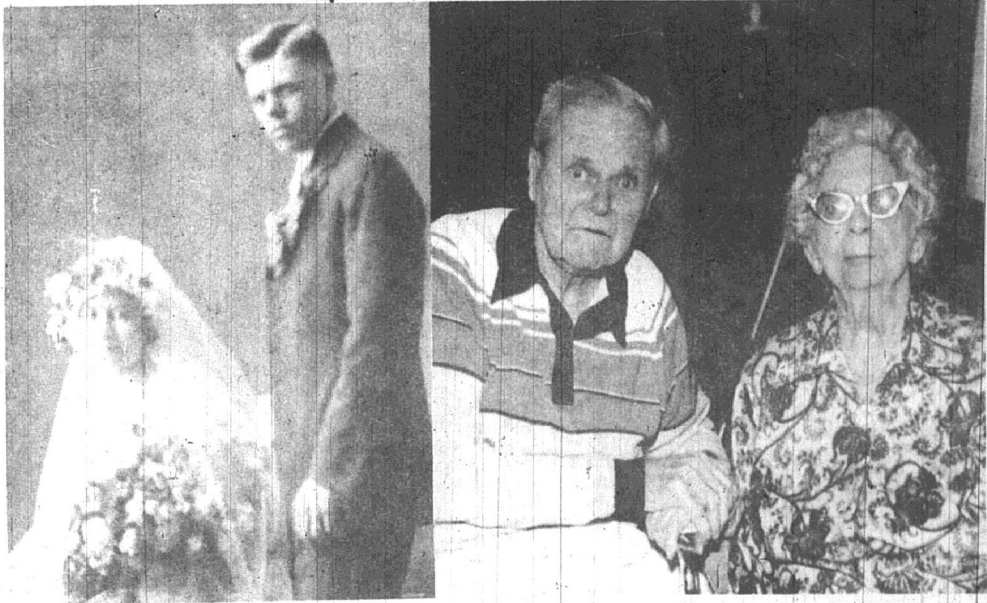

They were married on Oct. 27, 1917, at St. John Evangelical Church, now St. John United Church of Christ, the oldest church in Granite City. They celebrated their 70th (diamond) wedding anniversary this autumn. Still members of St. John, they were active for many years in organizations at the church.

Residents of 2137 Monroe St. for several decades, the Stegelmeyers previously lived on a farm in the local rural area and then on Jerden and Delmar avenues. He at one time was a butcher and then, as a Teamster, was a truck driver for the former Stolze Lumber Co.

Lifelong residents, both having been born here, they have seen nearly all of their city's history. She observed her 91st birthday in November and he will be 91 in June 1988.

They say, "We really don't care for a lot of material things — just our kids and grandkids." Their descendants now include 11 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren. Their four children, Walter Stegelmeyer, Melba Wood, Ralph Stegelmeyer and Mildred Kenison, all reside in Granite City.

The couple's health remains relatively good, although he has been confined to a wheelchair for the past five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Stegelmeyer

1987

Now well into their 71st year of married life, they both say "togetherness" is the key to their past and their future.

"We have a lot of love and devotion for each other, and we've made a point of having a lot of communication. Everything we do, we do together," the Stegelmeyers say. "There have been some hard times, but our love has carried us through."

Their advice to younger couples: "We've never made a decision that we didn't discuss and decide on together, and we think that's the way it should be done."

Lovely ceremony possible even on shoestring budget

By Pamela Selbert
Staff affiliate

Contrary to popular belief, it is possible to have a lovely, even elegant, wedding without spending the national debt. With some thought and careful planning, even a couple on a shoestring budget can make their special day beautiful.

Marie Rama, director for weddings and entertaining for Korbel Champagne in New York City, says the average cost today of a wedding that includes 175 invited guests, which she says is a fairly standard size, is about $10,000, a slightly staggering sum. But, says Rama, who appears at bridal fairs around the country for Korbel, there are many ways to pare down the expense, and some of them add a personal touch that makes the wedding even more memorable.

"If you are going to cut costs, you must be an educated consumer," she says. "Couples should allow themselves a minimum of six months, preferably a year to shop around, make comparisons."

The very first thing the couple needs to do, before any plans at all are made, is to decide what their budget will allow and agree to stick to it, she stresses.

Usually, one of the very first purchases is the bride's dress, Rama says. To save on costs, the bride could attempt to find a sample dress (which many stores use for display purposes) or a dress from a line that is to be discontinued, she suggests. More economical still is dress rental, she points out.

Flowers are another wedding expense that might cost less with some investigation. For instance, if the couple selects a day when another wedding will be held at the church, possibly the flowers can be "shared."

Another cost-cutting measure might be to look into the possibility of dealing with a nursery, using potted plants, rather than a florist. Or, a very nice, personal touch, Rama thinks, would be for the couple to grow their own potted plants.

Additional savings can be realized in the invitations chosen. Having them printed rather than engraved will trim quit a bit off the cost, she says.

If you're lucky enough to have a friend who does calligraphy, possibly this person would offer to write your invitations as a wedding gift. That personal touch truly would add a lovely note to any wedding, Rama points out.

At least half the cost of a wedding will be in the reception, so it is especially important to shop around for the best price, Rama says. And because most weddings take place in late spring-early summer, you will have more to choose from if you opt to have the wedding at a different time of year, she says.

Be sure to check references, use personal referrals, and by all means get all financial arrangements in writing, Rama stresses. And, do not pay any bill that is not itemized, she adds.

A home reception offers the most savings, as well as the most options, Rama says.

HEAVILY HAND-BEADED with sequins and pearls, this sophisticated satin gown from Bridal Originals has a scalloped hemline, large bow at the back waist and dramatic appliques on the flowing skirt.

"The home reception can be catered, or you can have food brought in and you provide the plates. Better still, friends or family members can prepare the food, making it more personal. In a hall or at home, a buffet is less expensive than a sit-down dinner," Rama says. "Rather than a complete meal, you can serve a smoked fish, for instance, or fish spread canapes, which are elegant, but less costly."

The only area of the wedding where Rama does not advocate cutting corners is in the photographs.

"It's through the photos that you remember your special day. Hire a professional and let this be your one extravagance. Besides, if a relative does the photos, they will probably be too occupied to enjoy the wedding themselves," she says.

Today's weddings blend tradition with innovation

The word for weddings today is traditional. Elegant clothes, age-old ritual and a spirit of nostalgia prevail at nuptials 1980s-style.

But does this swing back to the traditional mean that all innovation is out of style? Does the couple of today really have a wedding that is indistinguishable from the ones their parents and grandparents had?

"You need to look more closely to see what's happened," says Barbara Tober, editor-in-chief of "Bride's" magazine. "Today's weddings do seek out the best and most beautiful traditions of the past, in contrast to a few years ago when anything old was automatically suspect. But at the same time, they're very, very modern in that they express new ideals."

Fewer "rules" of etiquette, plus a climate that favors personal expression, have led couples to add their own creative touches.

"But today's individuality is very different from the 'do your own thing' brand of the last decade," Tober says. Couples do not throw out the whole ceremony and start from scratch; they just change or add little things. For example, many have their own vows or pass out printed ceremony "programs."

Modern weddings also break with the past over the ideal of equality. Today's bride may be dressed in a demure, turn-of-the-century style, but that is not where her head is. The working bride may have helped pay for that Victorian gown herself, and the ritual phrase of "love, honor and obey" has largely disappeared from the ceremony, according to "Bride's."

The "giving away," a part of some ceremonies in which the celebrant asks, "Who gives this woman in marriage?" has also changed with the times. Today, a couple might rewrite the question to read, "Who blesses this marriage?" with both the bride's and bridegroom's parents answering "We do."

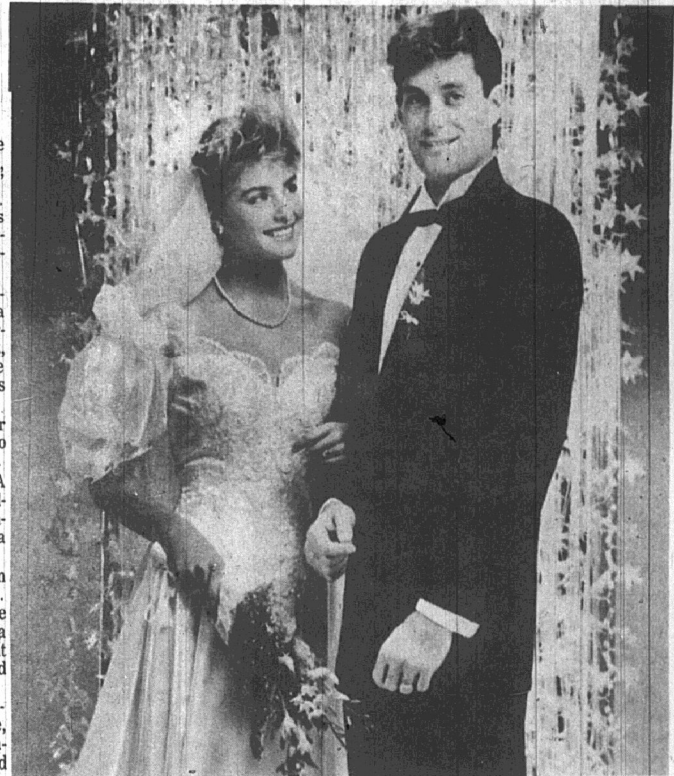

The same kind of thinking has likewise revised the idea of who pays for a wedding. Traditionally, the bride's parents shouldered the whole bill. "But, for the first time, there's a definite trend toward the sharing of expenses by the groom's family," Tober says.

This is partly economic, inflation for some families means everyone has to chip in for there to be a wedding at all.

But it is also a sign of the times. A bride's parents are no longer considered to be "marrying off" their daughter. Rather, the wedding is seen as a joining of two people and two families.

Finally, equality means a new role in the wedding for today's bridegroom. Attitudes in the past might have made the bridegroom feel somewhat like a spectator at his bride's "big day." But modern couples simply take for granted that it is his wedding, too.

Bridegrooms have new responsibilities: They help pick the wedding site, choose china patterns, address invitations and write thank-you notes. And they bask in a larger share of the limelight: Some men wear engagement rings, appear with the fiancées in newspaper announcements and even have showers thrown in their honor.

THE WING COLLAR shirt has inspired Pierre Cardin's "Ce Soir" tuxedo with a stand-up collar for the bridegroom who wants something just a little different. His bride wears a softly draped gown accented with lace by Alfred Angelo.

Consult expert for best flowers

Expertise can be defined as "expert opinion, or consideration of a subject by experts."

If there ever was a need for expertise, it is what a bride must have when choosing flowers for her wedding. Jayne Wright, wedding consultant at Nettie's Flower Garden, says, "The average bride is at a total loss in this area. She needs all the help she can get and should seek professional assistance early in the planning."

Many variables compound the problem: Is the wedding in a church or at a private home? Is it formal or informal?

Is it a second wedding? These tend to use even more colorful gowns and flowers.

"We must even consider the age, the weight and height of the bride," Wright says. "We can't put a huge cascade of flowers in the hands of a very petite young lady." There are even ethnic considerations. The floral needs of a Greek Orthodox wedding will vary from those of a Roman Catholic ceremony, a Jewish wedding or a Baptist wedding.

Wright believes the bride should begin planning with her florist three to six months prior to the event.

"Do your homework, and look through bridal magazines for ideas," she says. "Bring color swatches of all dresses with you, and a list of the people involved."

Concerning wedding trends, Wright says June is no longer the big month for weddings, though it is still one of the favorites. September and October are the most popular now, with January the only really slow month, she says.

She cites a few other trends that have come into bloom.

"The use of black and white flowers is very 'chic' now," Wright says. "In addition, weddings are getting bigger, but so are honeymoons. Exotic cruises and trips to romantic places are even more the 'in' thing now."

Couples married 50 years reveal secrets of success

By Gary King
Staff writer

Times were tough in 1937.

Jobs were scarce, money was even scarcer. It was the twilight time of the Great Depression, and the beginning of international rumblings that would eventually lead the United States into World War II.

It was also a year in which six local couples were married.

Fifty-plus years later, these couples prove that marriages can work.

So how have they done it?

The popular give-and-take principle has been the basis of Rosa and Julius Horvath's marriage, and she says it has worked well.

"You just have to learn to give in to each other a little bit," Mrs. Horvath said. "We always got along pretty good, and that's helped, too. My husband has always been a pretty good provider for us, and that made it a lot easier on both of us."

Perseverance has been the foundation of William and Gertrude Ashford's marriage.

"There's been a lot of hard times, and it's taken a lot of hard work," Mrs. Ashford said. "But when we got married, we agreed to keep each other for better or for worse. So you just have to stick it out through the hard times."

"I think couples today just expect everything too quick," Mrs. Ashford said. "You just can't get up and leave after every little argument. Marriages require more effort than that, but it's worth it."

John and Mildred Fleenor have a "good thing" in their marriage, and they see no reason to abandon it.

"You just have to learn to tolerate each other. Everyone has faults, but you just have to learn to accept each other for what you are," Mrs. Fleenor said. "We just believe in sticking things out to the end. We figure if you've got a good thing going, you might as well just stick with it.

"I just wish more people today would get married and stay married," she said. "I've been married over 50 years, and I don't have any regrets."

John and Willa Reed say their marriage has had its hard times, but the end has always justified the means.

"With being married at the end of the Depression, we've had it rough at times. It was really tough those first few years. But you just have to work through it, and trust the good Lord," Mrs. Reed said.

"After all, if you didn't have to work at a marriage, it probably wouldn't be worth having, anyway," she said.

George and Marjorie McClery have treated their marriage like a job. And an enjoyable job, at that.

"I had five little kids, so we didn't have that much time to argue and fuss," Mrs. McClery said. "A lot of couples starting out today think it's (marriage) going to be a bed of roses, and it's not. But I never wanted someone else to raise my kids for me. Being a mother and a wife was my job, and I didn't want anyone else doing that job for me."

Mary Wondra said she and her husband, Frank, have simply learned to work together through both good times and bad.

"When two people love each other, there has to be some give and take involved. There will be quarrels, that's human. Nobody's perfect. But we've just learned to stick together," she said.

And now in its 51st year, Mrs. Wondra said her marriage is still as crisp and fresh as ever.

"I see some couples that have been married 50 years, and they look like they're just ready to shrivel up and die," Mrs. Wondra said. "I still love marriage, though. As far as I'm concerned, we're just getting started."

Money management calls for teamwork from start

Successfully meshing two styles of handling money does not automatically happen just because two people say "I do," says Patrice Dollar, consumer education specialist for the University of Missouri Extension Service.

All too often, couples getting married do not adequately discuss their views on managing money. This can easily lead to arguments later, Dollar says.

Nearly every day there are several minor decisions to be made concerning money, whether to pay cash, use credit, pay a bill, that does not include major decisions such as tax planning, savings and investments, insurance coverage and ownership rights.

"Deciding who will be responsible for the financial matters and the paperwork of a marriage is not easy for a one-income couple. In a two-income marriage, it is even more difficult," Dollar says.

"Often the chores of paying bills and budgeting are handled exclusively by one spouse with the non-participating partner completely unaware of how things are managed," she says. "Any disruption to that pattern, such as the responsible spouse being seriously ill or an unexpected lengthy trip can leave the non-participating partner at wit's end."

If this sounds like your situation, Dollar advises you to discuss these questions:

- In two-income families, who pays for what?
- How many bank accounts should you maintain, separate or joint accounts? Who balances the checkbooks?
- Should you alternate who does bookkeeping to ensure each spouse is familiar with the family's financial dealings?

• Is each spouse adequately insured, so that the household will survive in the event of death or catastrophic illness or disability?

• Does the family budget include future needs and wants?

• Have you and your spouse made provisions to protect your financial resources?

Build an identity in creditors' eyes

Single or married, it is important to establish credit in your own name.

If all your new accounts read "Mr. and Mrs.," you may have no identity of your own in the eyes of creditors. A bank does not know that "Mrs. Jones" is the same person who paid off a college loan and managed five charge accounts as "Mary Smith."

So if you ever need money (to start your own business, to put toward a house), it helps if you have earned your own credit rating. Here are some tips on how to do it:

•Use one name in all your financial dealings. It might be Mary Smith or Mary Smith Jones. It should not be Mrs. John Jones.

•Maintain your own bank and charge accounts. Expect to be treated as an individual, if a bank or card issuer wants to know about your husband's income or credit standing, say it is irrelevant since the account is yours, not his.

•Insist that creditors keep separate files on you and your husband both, if you open any kind of joint account, this is your legal right. And make sure a credit card issued to you is your card, not just an "authorized user" card for his account.

Dyed maids' shoes add finishing touch

Bridesmaids always look more polished when their shoes coordinate with the color of their dresses. Finding an exact match is an easy task if you buy white shoes and have them professionally dyed.

Dyeing them yourself may be unwise, especially since certain stores provide the service free of charge.

In coloring, the choices are limitless, according to the Kinney Shoes chain of stores.

Here's what to do: Bring a swatch of material identical to your dress to the store, select your favorite style, determine the color, and allow the store a couple of weeks to finish the job.

After bringing the shoes home, you might want to try the following hints:

About a week before the wedding, wear the shoes indoors about an hour each day to become accustomed to them.

Scuff the soles a bit to avoid slipping down the aisle.

Today's gifts more unusual.

China, crystal and silver usually come to mind when people are asked what the "perfect" wedding gifts are.

However, while these are always welcome gifts, the possibilities have expanded to "anything the couple might enjoy," according to "Bride's" magazine.

"Couples marrying now have more defined ideas of what they need for setting up a home," says Barbara Tober, editor-in-chief of "Bride's." In contrast to the average bride and bridegroom of the past, they are older, or have been married before.

"They want the traditional items, of course, but they also appreciate gifts that are individual and creative, a bit out of the ordinary," Tober says.

"Bride's" has this advice for anyone shopping for a wedding present this season: Find out if the couple has listed their preferences with a Wedding Gift

Registry.

In addition to traditional gift items, couples can register for furniture, housewares, electronic equipment, luggage, sporting goods and specialty foods, Tober says.

If they have a distinct "personality," one of these ideas might fit:

- Gourmets: Wine glasses, wine rack, wine label scrapbook, membership in a wine-of-the-month club.

- Travelers: Luggage, sun glasses, beach towels, passport wallets, a travel alarm or iron.

- Social butterflies: Appointment book, engraved pen, theater or opera tickets, restaurant gift certificates.

- Sports fans: Tickets to sporting events.

- The couple setting up a home office: Bookends, paperweights, desk sets, remote telephone, tape recorder.

Weekend-long celebration makes event fun for guests

Today's bride rarely marries the boy next door. As the average age of the bride increases to 27 years, so does her opportunity to meet her fiancé through college or career. It's not uncommon for the bride and bridegroom to be from different cities, and for both to have friends and relatives scattered around the country.

Some couples in this situation choose to celebrate not with the traditional reception but with a "party" that lasts all weekend.

The "weekend-long wedding" encourages out-of-towners to make the trip and allows the bride and bridegroom, as well as the guests, time to visit with people they rarely see.

According to "Bride's" magazine, the weekend wedding goes beyond the traditional ceremony and reception to include a series of dinners, brunches and barbecues as well as sports and sightseeing events.

"The focal point of these weddings is no longer the 'wedding night,'" says Barbara Tober, editor-in-chief of "Bride's" magazine. "Instead it is the joining together of two families, an intensive experience that may be teamed up with an anniversary, a birthday party or other family celebration."

And, as a New York Times article pointed out, weekend weddings can be as diverse and unique as the couple.

Here are some tips on planning:

- Give careful consideration to activities you would enjoy.

Would a mutual hobby provide a framework for the weekend? Your gourmet club could prepare a feast that caters creative cuisine from Friday evening to Sunday afternoon.

Are high school friends coming? Stage a Friday night sock hop complete with rented juke box. Weekend fun might include a softball game (bride's team vs. bridegroom's team), sailing races, a kite-flying competition, a pool party.

- Let others help.

Be careful not to burden yourself with too many responsibilities. The bride's brother might organize a ping-pong match, the bridegroom's father might get his family together for Saturday breakfast. Your bridesmaids might host a softball game or cocktail party in your honor.

- Pick a home base.

Many hotels offer substantial room-rate reductions for a group. Each guest will pay for hotel rooms and travel expenses, but it's more fun if everyone is staying in the same place. You could help by reserving blocks of rooms.

- Spread the word.

How to inform guests of the weekend's activities? A printed card, enclosed with your invitation, might specify the host, location and time for each event. Guests then can determine which activities they would like to attend.

If plans are very detailed, consider sending a form letter. A follow-up letter could update plans.

Brides tell wacky tales of wedding day

By Gary King
Staff writer

Weddings are like snowflakes. Collectively, they all look alike.

But marriage ceremonies are entities all their own, with unique nuances that make each unlike any other. While the actual ceremony is usually over within minutes, wedding memories are lifelong.

When 12 area women were asked to describe the most memorable moments of the day, they said "I do."

Some of the memories were fond; others, like David and Kathy Hankins', were funny.

"When I think of my wedding, I think of this unity candle. The wax on the candle caught on fire, and it caught one of the bows on the candleholder on fire, too. It happened right in the middle of the sermon, and the priest didn't even notice it until it was up in flames," said Kathy Hankins, who was married Aug. 1.

Pete and Ruth Krieshok celebrated their 41st year of marriage Feb. 8. Ruth Krieshok said she has few fond memories of her special day.

"We especially chose to have our wedding right in the heart of winter. We thought it would be after the holidays, and would be a nice event for everyone to come to," Krieshok said. "Well, it was a very cold day, and I can still remember how the flowers had to be ran inside the church so they wouldn't freeze."

Whether a summer or winter marriage, weather often contributes to wedding memories.

"The thing I most remember about my wedding day is what a nice day it was outside," said Mary Trittich, who was married April 25 to her husband, John. "The weather was perfect, and it made the day perfect."

Walter and Linda Fabry's wedding day also passed without a hitch.

"My best memory is just getting married, period," said Linda Fabry, who was married July 25. "Everything about the day was perfect. We all had a good time, the weather was beautiful ... I was just very lucky."

Leo and Barb Nighohossian's Oct. 10 wedding last fall didn't enjoy the same fortune.

"I forgot the pillow for the ring bearer," Barb Nighohossian said. "When I think of my wedding, that's what I think of ... forgetting the pillow."

Nathan and Natalie Kessler also have haunting memories about the ring bearer's pillow from their June 23, 1984, wedding.

"It came time to exchange rings, and someone had tied our wedding rings in knots to the ring bearer's pillow," Kessler said. "It took my husband's best man forever to get my ring off that pillow, and when he finally got it off, it was the wrong ring."

Friends and family of the wedding party can also contribute to wedding memories, as was the case when Granite City Mayor Von Dee Cruse married his wife, Lois, on Oct. 5, 1946.

"The thing I remember most about my wedding is how nervous my father was," Lois Cruse said. "He was chewing gum, and someone had to ask him to spit it out before he went in the church. I wasn't really that nervous, but Von Dee thought I was because I kind of started shaking when we kneeled to pray."

Mary Walmsley remembers her parents when she thinks back to her June 1978 wedding to her husband, Gilbert.

"It was such a special day, and when I remember it, I think a lot of my parents," Mary Walmsley said. "We were married in my hometown (Waterloo, N.Y.), and in my home church. All my family was there, and the day was just real special."

The Rev. James and Debbie Benzing have "friendly" memories of their Sept. 19 wedding.

"The thing I think about the most when I remember my wedding is all of our friends that came together for the ceremony," Debbie Benzing said. "That's what really made it special for us."

Richard and Dorothy Votoupal have only their memories to remind them of their July 21, 1962, wedding.

"Out of everyone who took pictures of our wedding, nobody's photograph took," Dorothy Votoupal said. "We may not even be married, there's no pictorial record of it."

Mary Hay, who was married June 28, 1966, said she has two vivid memories of her marriage to Stephen Hay.

"I remember my dress, because that's what I was being married in and it was real special to me. I knew I would only get to wear that dress once, or at least I hope I'll only wear that dress once," Hay said. "I also remember that we (the bride and groom) had a cake fight at the reception. We chased each other all around the reception hall. It was hardly a traditional cake feeding."

Tradition also caught Mary Karoly by surprise when she married her husband, John, on Aug. 10, 1966.

"We were married in a Bulgarian Orthodox Church, and I remember the whole ceremony in general. We wore gold crowns, and then we switched them. We ... broke and shared a loaf of bread. I wasn't familiar with all the traditions, and I wasn't really prepared for them. It was a very emotional ceremony, and there was a lot of nervousness," Karoly said.

No two wedding memories are exactly alike. But in general, one memory prevails in the minds of most brides.

"The thing I most remember," said Dorothy Votoupal, "is just saying 'I do.'"

Anxiety

When taking that big step anxiety often close behind

By Pamela Selbest
Staff affiliate

For most people getting married, love isn't the only thing tugging at the heartstrings. Often there's an internal tug-of-war going on, with love at one end of them and fear at the other.

There shouldn't be any real contest, of course. Fear should be a featherweight compared to its opponent. But a touch of anxiety when making what is possibly the most important decision of one's life is not only understandable but very common. Though it takes different forms, fear is experienced to some extent by nearly all soon-to-be-married couples, according to Marie Rama, director for weddings and entertaining for Korbel Champagne in New York City.

Rama tours the country for Korbel, appearing at wedding fairs. She supplements her talks on wedding planning with brief discussions of what many couples worry about on a more fundamental level. Anxieties may deal with the ceremony itself, or may be more long-range in nature, she said. But every wedding fair yields several couples wishing to comment on what concerns them. This, and a survey on major worries regarding matrimony conducted by Korbel, has enabled Rama to compile her list.

"I don't really offer advice to couples," she said. "Mainly I want to make them aware that they aren't the only ones feeling anxious. What I do is offer practical comments, but generally when couples realize that everyone experiences the same problems, common sense enables them to work things out."

Money ranks as the No. 1 worry, she said. Fear of not having enough money in the future was experienced by nearly everyone surveyed, men and women alike.

"This used to be a worry for men alone, but now with women equally involved in careers, they're feeling it too," she said. "I think it's constructive to have such concerns. It's expensive to set up and maintain a home these days. It's important for a couple to realize which of them is the spender, which the saver; there needs to be a balance."

"Also it's a good idea to have general long-range economic goals, to pursue them wisely, and to put money to good use."

Next on the list are two fears that go hand in hand, she said. People ask themselves: Am I marrying the right person? And, will this marriage end in divorce?

"Because our divorce rate is so high, it's only natural to wonder," Rama said. "The wise person will put as much care as possible into choosing their mate. The key is getting to know a person well beforehand, determining what's really important to you, and then learning where the other person stands."

In-laws are another nearly universal concern. Many worry that differences of opinion will cause problems.

"There will almost always be some areas where a person's ideas will differ from those of his spouse's family, but it need not be a real problem," Rama said. "Much depends on the maturity of the couple. Each needs to decide how they will deal with situations, where they will draw the line (in permitting family members to interfere in a marriage), and just how important they will allow family opinions to be."

Couples also wonder whether they will be able to communicate well with each other, and whether honesty will prevail in the relationship. And some ask themselves: Will this relationship lose its excitement?

"I tell them, yes, the excitement will probably diminish; that's only natural," Rama said. "Marriages change, feelings will change, but if excitement lessens, that's not to say the marriage will suffer. Often it's better. Couples become more comfortable with each other."

"The important thing is to marry a person first and foremost because you want to be very good friends as well as lovers. But a couple must work at their marriage. A good one doesn't just happen."

Some individuals are concerned about the time that their careers demand and how this will affect the marriage, while those marrying for a second time often wonder how their involvement with children and ex-spouses will affect the new relationship.

And then, of course, some experience anxieties about the wedding ceremony itself, and the rules of etiquette that should be followed.

"There are certain general rules that are widely available," Rama said.

"Once everything has been properly arranged, then it's just a matter of following through without a hitch. The best advice I can give is rehearse, rehearse, rehearse. Know what is expected of you so well that when the time comes it will be almost second nature. I like to suggest also that a couple make a friend or relative the 'overseer' for the wedding and reception, relieving the couple from that burden, and making things a little easier for them."

Whether a couple's fears regard finances, in-laws, the ceremony, or any of the hundred other changes a new marriage may involve, the important thing is to plan carefully, Rama said. Know the other person, know yourself, know the rules.

"That way you should have a pretty good idea what to expect, now and later, and there shouldn't be any really big surprises," she said.

HEAVILY HAND-BEADED with sequins and pearls, this sophisticated satin gown from Bridal Originals has a scalloped hemline, large bow at the back waist and dramatic appliques on the flowing skirt.

New wedding gowns reflect quality, sophistication

By Lucyann Boston
Staff affiliate

The trend most strongly influencing bridal fashions for spring and summer has nothing to do with fabrics, waistline treatments or sleeve lengths. It has to do with ages.

Simply, today's brides are older than brides ever have been since the recording of such statistics began. The median age for brides in 1987 was 23.6 years, and the median age for bridegrooms was 25.8 years.

In wedding fashion, those figures translate into a demand for more sophisticated-looking gowns and a willingness and ability on the part of brides to pay for better fabrics and more elaborate styling. Most local bridal shops, for instance, estimate that the average cost of a wedding dress is $400 or above.

"Brides today are getting very sophisticated," says Betty Deall, director of design for Bridal Originals, a St. Louis-based wholesale bridal firm. "They've been out of college for 2½ years when they begin planning their weddings. They have more money to spend and they're looking for a slimmer, more sophisticated silhouette and more for their money. They want richer fabrics with a lot more beading and a traditional long train."

Elaborate features highlight a number of gowns this year.

"Many dresses are heavily beaded with crystals, seed pearls and iridescent sequins that reflect a touch of color or from whatever is around them," says Sharon Battoe of the House of Sharon in Fairview Heights.

However, Arthur Guenzburger, general manager of the La Merite shops in Crestwood and St. Ann, sees a difference between bridal gowns designed in America and imported dresses.

"The American market has come out with an understated, designer look while the imported dresses are very heavily beaded and jeweled," he says.

Guenzburger also sees a difference between what he calls the fashion looks and the traditional styles.

The majority of the dresses for spring and summer feature full skirts and attached trains, with the trendier slimmer skirts claiming 10 to 20 percent of the bridal business, he says.

Along with the slimmer skirts, many bridal consultants note a variety of different shapes becoming popular with spring brides.

A number of the new dresses we are seeing have a sculptured, Marilyn Monroe look to them," says Vicki Hagar, senior merchandise manager for J.C. Penney's Northwest Plaza store. Hagar says she also is seeing a great deal of interest in dresses made completely of lace.

Because of the emphasis on a straighter look, the fullness on a number of dresses is being swept back into a drift of fabric that resembles an old-fashioned bustle, according to Laura Vogt, a bridal consultant for Maiden Voyage Bridal, which has stores in west St. Louis County and St. Charles.

Henrietta Horwitz, a buyer and owner of Blustein's Bride's House in downtown St. Louis, refers to that bustle effect as an Edwardian polonaise.

Other shapes she sees as important for the upcoming wedding season include what is being called "the mermaid," which is fitted through the hips and flairs in the vicinity of knees, and "the tulip," which is rounded at the hips and tapers toward the floor.

The emphasis on tradition and formality is increasing the importance of the train in the styling of bridal gowns, she says.

"We not only have the cathedral train but what I call the cathedral train plus," Horwitz says. "It's as wide as it is long, heavily beaded and can feature lace cutwork that looks like widows in the back of the train."

A number of the representatives from the bridal shops noted the importance of a pale, blush pink as a color for wedding dresses.

"It brings out the natural skin tones in a woman's face and looks soft and feminine but is still traditional," Battoe says. "The girls who are adventure some enough to try it are loving it. We have pink in a window and even the guys are coming in and telling us how much they like it."

Neckline treatments vary from straight-across Sabrina styling to sweetheart necklines to puffed-sleeve looks that are meant to fall slightly off the shoulder, according to the consultants.

A number of Bridal Original wedding dresses, which are designed by Pat Trusik, feature a colonial-style, scarf-like fichu at the neckline.

Honeymoon couples enjoy sunny beaches, cruise

By Deborah Reinhardt
Staff affiliate

We have gathered today to give this man and woman several honeymoon ideas.

Most honeymoon couples seek a foreign place with a warm climate, said Ken Scheibal, owner of Stewart Travel in downtown St. Louis.

"If they get married May through July, they usually go to Hawaii or the Bahamas," said Scheibal, who has been in the travel business for about 20 years. "If they get married this time of year, they usually go to Cancun, Acapulco or Jamaica."

Some couples are more budget-conscious than others. Those with more money often book a seven-day cruise, while couples who have to watch a budget pick Florida.

Gale Williams, manager of Famous-Barr Travel at St. Clair Square in Fairview Heights, said a seven-day cruise is the most popular honeymoon choice. But many couples choose seven nights at St. Thomas or Cancun.

Williams added she expects Mexico to be more popular this year because of the strength of the dollar against the peso, which now has an exchange rate of about 2,200 pesos to $1. And Scheibal said low air fares are available to Mexico. There also are excellent hotels available at a reasonable cost.

Mexico

Warm weather, beautiful beaches and an interesting culture make Mexico a good choice for a romantic getaway.

For a couple who wants a quiet rest, Cabo San Lucas, at the tip of Baja, Calif., is where the desert meets the sea. Beaches entertain visitors with surfing, scuba diving or swimming. Fishing also is excellent. In fact, a tuna cannery was the industry at Cabo 40 years ago.

Acapulco, Cancun, Cozumel are other Mexican alternatives.

No matter where you go in Mexico, remember one rule about water. Hotels are generally pretty safe, as are fine restaurants. But stay away from water in smaller eateries or inns. Just in case, pack something for traveler's stomach.

The Caribbean

Mix turquoise-colored water, sugar-white beaches, a wide sample of cultures, and a notorious pirate history and you have the romantic Caribbean. Located southwest of Miami, this collection of islands continues to be a popular honeymoon destination.

The burgeoning cruise industry has increased the popularity of the Caribbean. There are some albeit beautiful but crowded places, like the St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands, Jamaica and Puerto Rico, as well as somewhat primitive, quiet islands like St. Lucia, St. Kitts or St. Vincent.

Islands like Guadeloupe or Martinique have a distinctive French feeling. There are fine French restaurants and shops. Guadeloupe has an interesting open-air market, but many merchants shoo curious tourists who are not interested in buying their wares. And visitors should be able to speak or read a little French, because menus often are printed in that language. Some shopkeepers will speak English, but that is a rarity.

Other islands, like Antigua, Barbados and Bermuda, have strong British roots, so English is the official language.

St. Maarten is half French and half Dutch. According to legend, a Dutchman and Frenchman divided the island in 1648 by pacing lengths. The quicker of the two was the Frenchman; consequently the French side of St. Maarten is larger than the Dutch. The two sides, however, have lived harmoniously during the past three centuries and now St. Maarten is making progress in developments such as resorts and shopping areas.

The Valley Isle of Maui is being discovered by more tourists, as is Kauai, the Garden Isle.

Two fifth grade students win school spelling bee

By Valerie Evenden Staff writer

VENICE — Two fifth grade students won top honors in the second annual "Spelling Bee" at Venice Grade School. The winner was Kenneth Jackson, with Dalfred Haynes taking second. Both are pupils in Raymond Mosby's fifth grade class. The spelling bee was held earlier this month during an all-school assembly. Student finalists from the first through eighth grades competed against each other. Parents were invited to view the event.

Prior to the contest, Principal Seth Kirkpatrick offered welcoming remarks and the competing students were introduced by Barbara Bailey.

The caller was Rogers Melford. Peressia Dandridge presented the contest rules.

Serving as judges and members of the organizing committee were faculty members Graciana Ponce, Mariann Hankin, Bailey, Dandridge and Ramona Gasper.

Diane Houltis, Venice Parent-Teacher Association president, presented trophies to Jackson and Haynes.

Smaller trophies also were awarded by the PTA to finalists in each grade level.

Classroom winners and runners-up who competed at the assembly were:

First grade/1 — Danielle Terrell and Cherynne Griggs; first grade/2 — Robert Johnson and Anthony Williams; third grade/2 — Timoni Shipp and Lakesha Williams.

Fourth grade — Lakesha Curtis and Carl Carnes; fifth grade — Dalfred Haynes and Kenneth Jackson; sixth grade/1 — Ben Cullum and Joshua McIntosh.

Sixth grade/2 — Chris Martin and Melissa Varner; seventh grade — Hope Robertson and Miesha Dampier; eighth grade/1 — Bentley McIntyre and Denise Brownlee; and eighth grade/2 — Marvis Greer and Yoshi Fryor.

Arts festival set at SIUE

More than 1,500 area educators, children, parents, and supporters are expected to participate in this year's Very Special Arts Festival to be held at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, March 3 and 4.

Thirty schools from the Illinois counties of St. Clair, Madison and Macoupin will be participating in the event.

Festival activities are scheduled from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. each day. Activities for the children include: puppet making, cookie decoration, face painting, string "paintings," a "hug" booth, and many other events.

Other highlights will include dancing, story-telling, clown performances, and music. In addition, students and their teachers will attend sessions on art education.

The sessions will be presented by four local consultants in fine arts: Joseph Moreno, music therapy; Kathleen Raley, expressive therapy; Teresa Kehrer, dance therapy; and Margaret Ortmeier, creative art therapy.

Grigsby sixth

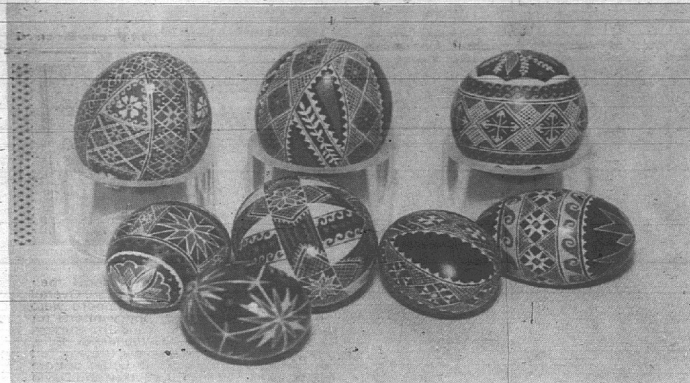

On Feb. 13, six students from Grigsby Junior High School participated in a Mathcounts contest at SIUE.

The students were Melissa McIlvoy, Chris McMillan, Scott McMillan, Kerri Rebstock, Shelly Wilbur and Jennifer Worham.

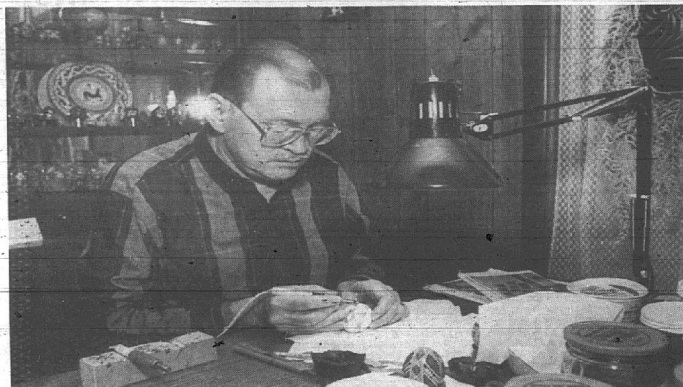

More than 35 schools participated. Grigsby placed sixth in the overall competition.

Chris McMillan placed fifth in individual competition and Scott McMillan finished 10th. There were 125 students in the individual contest.

The students were coached by high school honor students and substitute teacher Joyce Curran.

Bakan's Ukrainian eggs

EGGCITING CLASS: Ukrainian egg decorating is one of several personal interest workshops being offered through the Saturday Experience at the Granite City Campus of Belleville Area College. The course is taught by George Bakan of Wood River. For information, persons may call 1-800-BAC-5131, ext. 441.

Egg dyeing to be taught at GCC

George Bakan of Wood River will teach a pre-Easter workshop in Granite City on the ancient art of Ukrainian egg dyeing.

The workshop, offered in two Saturday morning sessions, March 5 and 12, is part of Saturday Experience, a series of personal interest sessions offered at the Granite City Campus of Belleville Area College.

For information on the workshop, the numbers are 801-0600 or 1-800-BAC-5131, ext. 441.

Bakan, 58, has demonstrated his skills at the St. Louis Art Museum, the National Shrine of Our Lady of the Snows in Belleville, and seminars throughout the midwest.

"The egg symbolizes eternity and is part of the celebration of the rite of Spring. I learned the techniques from my parents when I was a boy and I have been doing it ever since," said Bakan.

He draws a design in pencil on a raw egg. He uses a pen-like instrument to apply beeswax over different parts of the design and dips the egg in different dyes. "It's a layering effect of wax and colors," said Bakan.

After the egg is dipped in the last color it is heated in an oven. The layers of wax are wiped off to expose the intricate designs and colors. A small hole is drilled in each end of the egg and its contents are blown out.

Each village in the Ukraine, near the Black Sea, has its own symbols, meanings and secret formulas for dyeing eggs. These techniques are passed down from one generation to another.

OUR NEW EATING DISORDERS PROGRAM IS FUNDAMENTALLY DIFFERENT.

Ours is a program for and by women.

Eating disorders affect mostly women. And this new program sees, understands, and treats eating disorders from a woman's point of view.

Our program is called the FOCUS Eating Disorders Program. It's the newest in a whole range of FOCUS Programs for Women that are helping today's women cope, change, and grow.

Like all FOCUS programs, the FOCUS Eating Disorders Program offers a special expertise in the psychology of women and in the issues and problems today's women face.

FOCUS subscribes to no standard treatment for anorexia or bulimia or the emotional problems caused by overweight or any of the other conditions it treats.

FOCUS treats each woman, one at a time. Individual make-up and needs, not a textbook, dictate treatment.

One last difference between FOCUS and other programs: FOCUS, with few exceptions, is an outpatient program. We believe that truly individualized treatment can make outpatient treatment a highly effective approach in most cases.

If you are a woman who suffers from an eating disorder or think you may, call the FOCUS Eating Disorders Program for more information at 344-2727.

Badge earners

Teleconference to help Scouts gain members

The Cahokia Mound Council, Boy Scouts of America, will be taking part in a "New-Troop Teleconference," a nationally coordinated campaign designed to increase the number of Boy Scout troops in each of the 400 Scout councils across America.

The campaign highlight will be a nationwide closed-circuit teleconference March 10, to be broadcast via satellite to some 400 locations. Locally, according to Terrance T. Toth, Cahokia Mound Council new unit organization and teleconference chairman, the council's primary objective is to have more Boy Scout troops chartered by June 30 than the previous year. The council's objective is to maintain that increase Dec. 31.

Commitments from perspective chartered organizations will be phoned from the main office of Compute-It MC., using its satellite facilities.

Organizations interested in chartering a Boy Scout troop can contact Cahokia Mound Council, Boy Scouts of America, 2016 Delmar Ave., or call 876-6686 for more information.

Granite City Press-Record Journal 877-7700

It was an eventful day for Gurlin and his family.

There are 5 million of us

Our numbers are growing.

There are now 11,548,000 Illinoisans, compared to 11,427,429 in 1980.

The big task will be done on a regional basis, led in our neck of the woods by Stanley D. Moore, based in Chicago.

IT ALL DATES BACK to our (1797) Constitution.

Article I, Section II, called for a census every decade, the first one in 1790.

Representation in Congress will be among the results of the new census.

CHICAGO IS RARELY bigger than in 1980, rising to 3,009,530 from 3,005,072.

The other four gainers are (No. 4) Springfield, (5) Aurora, (8) Waukegan and (9) Elgin.

Those losing population since 1980 are (No. 1) Rockford, (3) Peoria, (5) Decatur, (7) Joliet and (10) Evanston.

NARROW GAINS also have been attained by the other two states in Chicago's census region.

Indiana's biggest city, Indianapolis, has risen to 719,620 from 700,807.

Illiana's second through 10th largest cities in the order are Fort Wayne, Gary, Evansville, South Bend, Hammond, Muncie, Anderson, Terre Haute and Bloomington.

Wisconsin's 2-10 are Madison, Green Bay, Racine, Kenosha, Appleton, West Allis, Eau Claire, Wausau and Janesville.

Man wins new car in contest

Armed with 240 Journals - contestants were required to design their craft from the entry form that appeared in Journals published over the last two weeks - Gurlin arrived at Kiel at 10 a.m.

He sweats he did not swipe his papers off the lawn of 239 neighbors, but acquired them at his local newspaper office. Gurlin immediately set about constructing his planes, using the regulation paper clips and Scotch tape, but had flown only a few of them when, in the heat of excitement, he developed severe chest pains. Fearing the worst, he was rushed to Kiel's first-aid station. An hour later, after he said he was reassured he would see the sunset, Gurlin returned to the action.

By this time, the hall was a sea of tangled white. "The floor was littered with the twisted debris of downed aircraft, a sad sight," said master of ceremonies Mike Anderson, a disc jockey on the KIX "Morning Crew." KIX station owner Shelly Davis speculated that "20,000, maybe 30,000 pathetic little wrecks lay strewn about."

But also by this time, the first plane had been successfully launched through the sunroof by contestant Kevin Sankey, 34, Ferguson. An hour later, two more aircraft hit their mark, followed by three others. Seconds before time was called at 2 p.m., Gurlin turned on the steam.

"I did what I had to do," he said, as he stepped further streamlining the plane and racing down to the lower balcony to make his final shot. Gurlin's plane flew through the sunroof, the last of seven to land inside.

Other finalists were Sankey; Mike Scherr, 25, Creve Coeur, who scored an amazing two points in his plane; Mark Culp, 24, Fenton; Frank Sczurek, 26, Mascoutah; and David Hawkins, 12, Spanish Lake.

A delighted Gurlin, security guard for Dow, put Laser Co. Hercules, said he would now retire his 1976 Dodge Aspen in favor of the Ford. "I feel fabulous," he said, examining his new $10,300 car from all angles.

Other contestants landing their planes in designated areas claimed 2,000 T-shirts, Frisbees and paper cups, all donated by Grandpa's.

"This has surpassed my wildest dreams," said Davis, of the now annual event.

Regional Roundup

The system goes back to the Han Dynasty, which established a 12-year cycle based on the revolutions of Jupiter around the sun.

HOW WILL 1988 election issues play in Peoria? That was the topic Feb. 20 in Peoria, where 240 Illinoisans were invited to hold a citizen assembly, among them James M. Hendon, a Peoria insurance and real estate executive.

Issues discussed included the federal budget deficit, the global spread of nuclear weapons, agriculture, Central American policy, international trade, U.S.-Third World relations, working families and long-term care.

Citizen Assembly members will be at "Illinois residential Town Hall Meetings" to be televised live from Chicago March 10 (involving Democratic presidential candidates) and March 11 (Republican candidates).

GEORGE BUSH, one of the Republican contenders, is said to be definitely planning to be at the Madison County GOP Lincoln Day dinner, scheduled for March 10, in Bethalto's Knights of Columbus Hall.

The vice president will be there," dinner planners were told by Ed Murrane, deputy director of the Bush campaign.

Later this year, the Census Bureau will contact 39,000 local government officials, encouraging their participation in achieving a "complete count." Officials will be asked to organize volunteer programs to develop ways of seeking the public's cooperation.

IT MAY BE 1988 on your calendar, but as of Feb. 17 it became the Year of the Dragon in the Chinese calendar. Last year was the year of the rabbit and next year it will be snakes.

These symbols, along with the horse, sheep, monkey, rooster, dog, boar, rat, ox and tiger, have been around for more than 2 centuries.

Trojans, Devils on collision course?

Madison in semis after struggling by Lovejoy, 66-62

DUPO — Although he wasn't exactly jumping for joy, Rich Essington is already one step ahead of last year.

In his first season at Madison, the Trojans failed to get by the first round of the regional, losing to East St. Louis Assumption right off the bat. On Tuesday, Essington's team survived their first-round test in the Dupo Regional. And "survived" is the operative word.

It was shaky all the way, but Madison got out of town with a 66-62 win over Lovejoy to advance to tonight's regional semifinal game against Assumption. The Pioneers were 60-62 winners over Columbia in another first-round game on Tuesday.

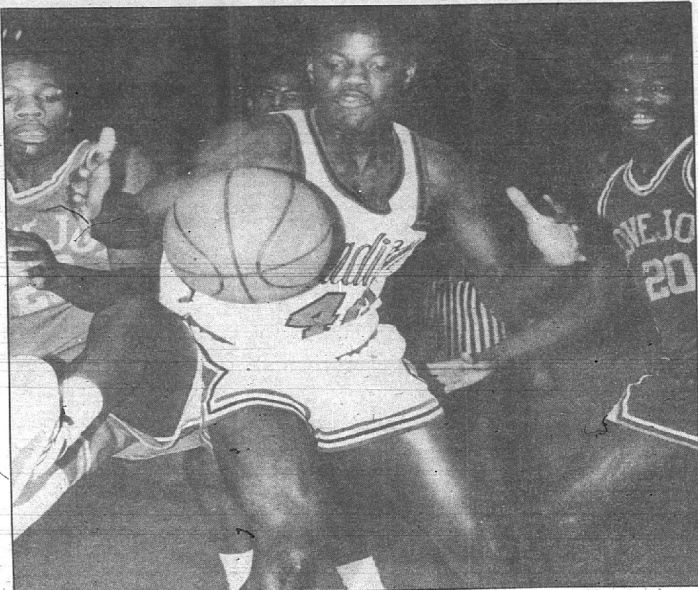

It was shaky all the way, but Madison got out of town with a 66-62 win over Lovejoy to advance to tonight's regional semifinal game against Assumption. The Pioneers were 60-62 winners over Columbia in another first-round game on Tuesday.

Even before Assumption had won, Essington was looking forward to the Pioneers — and he wasn't sure if he liked what he saw in the near future.

"Take a look at these guys," he said of the Pioneers. "That's a good basketball team out there. If we play like that tonight against them... Well, I would say we will need a 30 to 40 percent better effort to get past them."

Of course, it's almost a given. When any combination of Madison, Venice and Lovejoy meet together on the basketball court, it's going to be an all-out battle for minutes — or more.

"They did an excellent job," Essington said of the Wildcats, who closed out the season at 6-12 (the Trojans are 19-7). "They played hard all the way, and really rebounded well."

But the Wildcats were crippled in the fourth quarter when Dennis Miller (18 points) and Terrell McKire (29 points) fouled out. McKire, an all-state prospect who is one of the leading scorers in the state with a 30-point average, bowed out with 17 seconds to go just when Lovejoy needed his three-point shooting ability. But it was Aaron Jones, the Trojans' 6-6 junior center, who made the biggest difference. Jones pumped in a career-high 25 points, and he was nine of 10

Venice cruises into title game with 89-65 win

DUPO — Post-season high school basketball is supposed to be exciting and intense. Someone forgot to tell the Venice Red Devils and the Lebanon Greyhounds.

The shake the rafters on Wednesday, but that was just fine for the favored Devils, who rolled to an easy 89-65 win in a regional semifinal game.

The Devils (19-5) will play the winner of tonight's Madison-East St. Louis Assumption game in the regional title game on Friday at 7:30 p.m. Lebanon ended its season at 13-14 — with four of those losses coming to Venice. They have lost seven times to the Devils in the last two years.

"We played good for the first game of the regional," said Devco coach Clinton Harris. "It's going to be a different story on Friday, though. We will have to be at our best."

They weren't at their best on Wednesday, but they were more than good enough to dispose of the Greyhounds. Sophomore Tony Formoso had 24 points, including five three-pointers for Lebanon. One Devil game at 13-13, but Dale Turner hit two free throws and added a late bucket for a 17-13 lead after one quarter.

Lebanon never got closer than three in the second quarter and the Venice players in the end of the half made it 38-27 at the intermission. Turner had 22 points and 11 rebounds to pace Venice.

"Dale's one of the top two guards in the area and he showed the leadership tonight," Harris said. "We had to come back to beat Lebanon the last time and we came out in overconfident. They have good

Gritty Warrior skaters went farther than they should have

As high school winter sports go, hockey isn't exactly first on everyone's mind.

Basketball and wrestling command the lion's share of the attention. Those are both fine sports, but for a hockey fan like me, the fact that Granite City has a team in the Mid-State Club Hockey Association is just great.

Like every other hockey fan from this area, I've been in love with this most brutal of sports since the Blues arrived in St. Louis in 1967. There's nothing that can match an intensely played game with playoff position on the line.

And so it was that I marveled at the effort of Granite City Warriors this year. Those of you aware of the hockey program at GCHS — know that the Warriors have been blessed with some pretty good talent the year. Names like Danef, Laub, Carden, Yurkovich, Schnefke and Hintersdorf are the roster of the Warriors. They're a league power.

But they lost 15 seniors from last year's team and should have been content with winning a weak North Division this year. They were 10-2 in divisional play but only 1-8 outside of the league, so they had no right to expect much in the playoffs.

Yet they upset a superior Parkway West team in come-from-behind fashion in the first round and gave a superior Vianney team all sorts of problems in the quarterfinals. Although the Griffins won the series by scores of 4-4 and 7-1, it was far from a breeze. The second game was 2-1 in the third period and three goals came very late after the outcome was decided and Henson removed his top players.

"They were whipped," he said. "And I wanted the fans we had there to have the opportunity to give them a hand."

What made it such an effort was that Henson went with a skeleton crew. He had no more than nine players he really felt comfortable with in a tight situation. There was no junior varsity team this year, costing some of his less talented players valuable ice time.

But Henson might have found a goalie for the future in freshman Robbie Nolan, who had a great playoff. And skaters like Matt Krekovich, Todd Richey, Tommy Brown, Rich Grogan, John Culibek and Matt Schnefke put in yeoman efforts by a cracked rib and had no business being on the ice in the playoffs. Every hit he took was a new adventure in pain. But he kept going back and he's just a sophomore. Schnefke had 21 goals and 25 assists for 46 points.

But the gradations of Krekovich, Richey, Grogan and Brown will hurt. Krekovich had six goals and six assists in the playoffs to finish with 30 goals and 30 assists.

"Matt was our best player in the playoffs," Henson said. "He's so strong on his skates. And to score like that against good competition shows something."

Richey moved back to defense this year and was wonderful, while still managing four goals and 16 assists.

"I don't think there were many defensesmen better than Todd was in the playoffs," Henson said. "He sacrificed scoring to move back there and he was just tremendous."

Brown, almost always the smallest player on the ice, managed 23 goals and 37 assists and bounced back from the physical beating he took from bigger opponents.

"Tommy has a big heart," Henson said. "Losing him will be tough after four years."

And Grogan chipped in with 20 goals and 18 assists, including five goals and four assists in the playoffs. He was the target of some vocal Vianney fans on Monday, a sure sign of his effectiveness.

"He earned their respect," Henson said. "He's just a tremendous player and they knew it. If I had 12 Richie Grogans and they stood 6-1, I could take that team into the NHL."

The one player Henson expressed some disappointment with in the playoffs was Jim Rodden. The sophomore has a world of talent, but gets lost on the ice at times, not knowing where his teammates are and what pass to make — although GRANITE CITY — Tri-City Speedway will band together with the GT Racing Association for the 1988 season.

Bob Stanton and George Carroll will again promote the Godfrey Speedway while Vince Ghirardi will promote Tri-City. The two tracks will combine points.

Godfrey Speedway will race sportsmen's cars, street stock cars and Detroit Bombers on the 1/4-mile high bank dirt track on Friday evenings, while Tri-City Speedway will race U.M.P. late model stock cars on the 1/4-mile dirt track and sportsmen's cars, street stock cars and super modifieds on the 1/4-mile dirt tracks on Saturday evenings.

Both tracks will be running special events throughout the spring and summer season. Godfrey Speedway, owned by Wil Spalding, is now busy widening parts of its track, installing new retaining walls and updating its scales. Tri-City Speedway, owned by Elvis Doolin, will soon be getting 100 large truck loads of its famous black dirt. New fencing will also be installed. The parking lot will be getting some work as well as some new lights and scales.

Tri-City will open the 1988 season with an All-Star Circuit of Champions late model stock car race on April 8-9. Two more All-Star circuits will be back later in the year. The track is also trying to work out a deal for a USAC late model stock car race and a USAC sprint car race as well as a S.A.R.S. late model stock car program.

A three-weekend series agreement has been reached with Miller Beer Co. through the local Vesco Distributing Co., with dates to be announced later. Negotiations are under way for the U.M.P. Race of Champions at the end of the season with the possibility of some television coverage.

More than 170 different drivers and cars raced at Godfrey in 1987, more than 350 raced at Tri-City.

Anyone interested in season tickets, group rates or more information should call Bob Stanton at 466-6673 during the day or 466-6129 in the evening; or call George Carroll at 462-1488. For Tri-City Speedway call Vince Ghirardi at 876-4198 or 876-0222.

Godfrey Speedway will announce its opening date later.

Stars win thriller against Lakeland

While Charles Clagget and Darwin Montana more often can't lead the way when GCC wins, there have been exceptions.

Tuesday was Robbie Carter's turn as the 6-6 sophomore from East St. Louis Lincoln scored a career-high 29 points in helping the Stars to a 94-92 win at Lakeland (Mattoon, Ill.) College. Clagget led the way with 32 points and Montana added 13.

The game was tied at 45-45 at halftime, but the Stars squeaked out the win in the second half. GCC is 18-12 and has won five in a row. They close out the regular season against Kaskaskia tonight before opening regional play on Saturday.

The Stars need to win against Kaskaskia and win one post-season game for a 20-win season.

Region XXIV pairings are at right. The winner advances to the 16-team National Junior College Athletic Association finals in Hutchinson, Kan.

Pea-less whistle catching on among area cage referees

By David Wilhelm

Staff affiliate
After all these years, basketball officials have finally found a way to get some relief, and it's not solely in a dose of Pepto Bismol.

No, fans and coaches haven't decided to begin taking it easy on officials by agreeing with every call, but one thing's for sure — they'll certainly hear each of them.

It's finally arrived. It's plastic and lightweight, but it sure blows off a lot of steam.

It's the pea-less whistle, and it's either in or on its way to a symposium or arena near you. When you hear it, you'll know it's around.

"It's a piece of equipment that was badly, badly needed with sports officials," said referee Joe Forte of Smyrna, Ga., who along with partner Ron Foxcroft came up with the idea. "It does exactly what it's supposed to do. There's no problem with anyone hearing the whistle."

The whistle, appropriately named the Fox 40 (Fox for Foxcroft, 40 for Forte), was developed by Hamilton, Ont., engineer Chuck Sheppard and began being heard throughout the country in November. It was used in several games during the Collinsville-Schnucks Holiday Classic in December.

"My partner, Ron Foxcroft, and myself were in San Paulo, Brazil, in 1984 officiating in the pre-Olympics basketball tournament," explained Forte, who refereed in the Southeast, Atlantic Coast, Big East, Colonial and Atlantic 10 conferences, among others. "The top three teams went to the Olympics in Los Angeles, so it was a very important tournament. "Spectators and fans are very vocal and emotional in that part of the country. The noise level was so high that play went on even after we blew our whistles."

"I came back to the states and Ron returned to Canada. We talked to some engineers and told them we wanted a whistle with a shrill."

Three and a half years later, Forte and Foxcroft have their whistle and officials everywhere are catching on. The days of being ignored are finally in the past.

Alton official Ed Hightower recently began using the Fox 40, and he's been pleased with the results.

"It's a good whistle, especially in a noisy gym when the crowd noise is excessive," said Hightower, who calls games in the Big 10, Big 8 and Missouri Valley conferences. "The whistle does a good job because it has a shrill sound to it and it gets volume over the crowd."

"I didn't like it at first. Like anything, when a new concept comes on, there's always some apprehension. It has a different type of shrill sound to it. It takes some getting used to, but you're finding more and more officials coming over to it."

The problem with the pea whistle, according to Forte, was that the more times it was blown, the heavier the pea got. Eventually, the whistle's shrill sound was diminished and, in some cases, lost.

The Belleville Journal ordered a Fox 40 recently. The whistle arrived in time for high school referee Fred Floreth of Litchfield to use it during a Litchfield-Bellefonte East varsity game the next night. Floreth had heard of the whistle, but never used it. "This was the first varsity game I've called with a new whistle in 10 years, but I like it," said Floreth. "It's wider and it has a nice lip, so it's easier to keep in your mouth. Plus, with no pea, it (the pea) won't get stuck if you're sweating."

Floreth, like Hightower, also discovered something else about the Fox 40.

"I did find that you have to blow it harder to be heard, but I don't think the fans noticed what was going on," said Floreth. "It's more shrill, and in a game like this, it's easier to hear. In a 9 a.m. game at a holiday tournament when nobody is there, you might want to use a regular whistle."

Floreth's partner, Greg Barton of Jerseyville, used the Fox 40 for the third time during the Alton-Bellefonte East game. Barton said the whistle has another distinct advantage over the pea whistle.

"It's a lot harder to have an inadvertent whistle," said Barton. "With the other whistle, it can happen pretty easy if you get hit in the stomach or shoved on the floor."

Forte said the whistle is "ultra-sonically welded" instead of glued. Because of its unique design, everything must be perfect during production.

"Nothing can go wrong with the whistle in production (if it's going to work properly)," said Forte. "If something's wrong with the chamber, it won't give you the sound you want."

"We recently purchased a machine that would test the whistle. That way, we have some quality control."

The whistle is primarily in use at the collegiate level, but Forte expects it to be in use everywhere in the near future. "We're excited about it because ultimately we want every official to begin using it because we feel it's the best product out there," said Forte.

The whistle costs $5.95, or three can be purchased for $14. A $2 handling cost is also required.

Fox 40 whistles aren't available in sports stores yet, but can be ordered by writing Fortran Inc., P.O. Box 250, Smyrna, Ga., 30081. Phone orders (404-438-1045) are also accepted.

Charity game for Parents Plus, ABL

A charity basketball game will be held on March 2 at the Granite City High School gym.

The game will feature the Granite City Cougars, featuring Granite City Mayor Von Dee Cruse and several Granite City police and firemen, against a team from KMOX and KHTV radio stations.

Half-time entertainment will be provided by the Big Red Line cheerleading squad.

The game is sponsored by Richard Schaus, candidate for Eagle Scout, with all proceeds going to Parents Plus of Granite City and ABL Pregnancy Center of Collinsville. Tickets are $2 in advance and may be purchased at Schnuck's in Granite City or the Boy Scouts office, 2016 Delmar Ave. Tickets can also be purchased at the door for $2.50. Children under 12 are charged $1.

Steamers struggling, but hope is abundant

By Dan Caesar
Staff affiliate

The Steamers' ship continues to take on water, but for at least the time being it still is afloat. Joe Farrell, the club's chairman of the board, said he is more optimistic now than before the recent league meetings in Tacoma.

"I've got a half-dozen things that need to fall into place properly for things to work," Farrell said. The primary things are income generation and expense reduction. We need to generate some capital and then demonstrate to ourselves that we can make a profit afterwards."

But he said that is a realistic goal. Meanwhile, the Steamers have trimmed three more members of the front-office staff from the payroll.

"We'll do whatever it takes to try to make a go of this," Farrell said. "I'm determined to make a go of this thing for the long term, not just to finish this season and then lose it."

The club has laid off six front-office people since financial difficulties hit earlier this season. Six people remain in the front office.

The Steamers met their Feb. 15 payroll and have another payday March 1. The players are paid twice monthly.

The key period for the club finishing the season now appears to be mid-March. If they make it that far, then they can dip into a $250,000 letter of credit placed with the league when the current ownership group, headed by Farrell, purchased the team last summer from a consortium led by Tom Bowers.

However, that would not bode well for the future of the team under local ownership. The league then would be running the franchise.

"That's a last-resort type measure," Farrell has said. "We do not want it to come to that, although it is a possibility. If on May 1 this club closes down, well that's not what we got into it for. The main thing is making it through for the long term."

Meanwhile, the Steamers will try to turn things around on the field. They are wallowing at the bottom of the Western Division standings with the worst record in the MISL.

The Steamers trail fourth-place Los Angeles by 5½ games in the battle for the final playoff spot in their division.

Nebos has been sidelined eight weeks because of torn knee cartilage. He led the league in goal scoring for much of the early going this season, and has scored 20 in the 13 games in which he has played.

He has returned to practicing with the club.

"Getting him back is a very important thing, as is the return of Tony (Bellinger)," Glavin said. "We've struggled offensively without Nebo and have made mistakes defensively without Bellinger."

Bellinger, recovering from a leg injury that has kept him sidelined all season, still is several weeks away from returning.

"Injuries have hampered us a lot," Glavin said. "We've been inexperienced on defense all season, without Tony. And you take an offensive weapon like Nebo away, it takes its toll. But we just have to keep going at it. If the team's situation is not going to get better by itself."

Lancers bumped in super-sectional

COLLINSVILLE — The Belleville East Lancers had the Blume taken off their season on Tuesday.

Mattoon's Barb Blume scored 30 points to lead Mattoon (25-1) past the Lancers 76-68 in the Collinsville Class AA Super-Sectional.

The Green Wave took the Purple Palace of Fletcher Gymnasium by storm as they rolled into this weekend's state tournament in Champaign. East finished its season at 24-4, the best record in the school's history.

Blume connected on four three-pointers during the game and, as averaging almost two three-pointers per game this year while being successful on more than half of her shots from beyond the 19-foot, 9-inch stripe. The 5-10 senior, averaging 25 points a game this year, came out firing as Mattoon gained an early 22-9 lead.

Stephanie Newman, a 6-0 forward, added 23 points and 12 rebounds for the Green Wave. The Lancers tried to battle back behind 5-11 Reflye Williams. She had 28 points, 13 rebounds and five blocked shots, but fouled out with 3:33 to play with East still trailing 62-57.

East committed 17 turnovers in the first half and was down by 12 points at intermission, but Jodie Richardson scored 12 of her 19 points in the fourth quarter for the Lancers.

Spinnerbaits good for spring bass fishing

By Larry Bulus

Most bass fishermen I know rely heavily on spinner lures for late winter and early spring bass fishing. Spinnerbaits catch bass at any time of the year, but have an extra appeal to fish just coming out of a long lethargic winter.

Because early spring ponds and lakes often range from murky to muddy, spinnerbaits rate high with springtime fishermen. In fact, I prefer a pond to have more than a little color, because the dingier the water is, the shallower the bass will be found feeding. Dark water serves as a cover of sorts. I've caught bass up to eight pounds on spinnerbaits in muddy water barely deep enough to cover them.

There are several models of spinners for bass, with most anglers choosing either a single spinner or a tandem spinner. These are shaped somewhat like an open safety pin, with the lead head, hook and skirt on the bottom and the spinner overhead.

In early spring I mainly fish shallow, weedy, brushy water with a visibility depth of no more than six to 12 inches. Here is where the spinnerbait's great versatility comes in because, unlike most other baits, you can fish it anywhere from top to bottom, fast, slow or in between, and on any one of a half-dozen different retrieves.

My choice in shallow, snag-filled water is a three-eighths ounce tandem spinner. The two spinners give the bait added loft and flash in the water, making a slower retrieve possible without having the metal lure sink into goopy algae or weeds.

I don't make a big fuss over the color of the rubber or bucktail skirt. If the water is muddy, skirt color means nothing because the bass cannot see the lure anyway. In murky water, however, I'll usually choose a yellow skirt, in clearer water a white skirt, and whenever those fail to catch fish I'll go to a black skirt.

he made a beauty to send Grogan in alone in the first period Monday. Grogan was robbed by Vianney goalie Kevin Kirkiewicz.

"He doesn't always know where he is," Henson said. "But we will work with him. Jim just has to much ability to let it get away."

Roberson had only one goal and four assists in the playoffs, but still led the team with 31 goals and 37 assists for 68 points — the most in Granite City history. He can skate like the wind and can freewheel with the best of them.

The Warriors have made it to the Arena for the league finals twice in Henson's six years, but he thinks they had the opportunity to do it four times.

And although he counted on his nucleus of top-flight players, he got good shifts from Jim Hawkins and Mike Parkinson on Monday. And Charlie Alexander played an excellent game.

Roberson and Scherke will be back, as will defencemen John Culibek and Jason Bucatch. They all have two years to go except Roberson, who has only a year of eligibility left. And there are some seventh and eighth graders on the way to help.

"I'm pleased," Henson said. "We had a small group of good players and a lot of others who were almost beginners. But they can be proud of what they did this year and in the playoffs."

NOTES: Henson said he will hold an hour of practice on March 9 at 9:30 p.m. at the Wilson Park rink for anyone who wants to play high school hockey. That includes eighth graders who will be freshmen next year through juniors in high school. The hour will include skating and registration.

from the free-throw line. The last two free throws came with 17 seconds left after McKire committed his fifth foul and clinched the game — or so it turned out. But the Trojans weren't without some anxious moments.

Quincy Williams committed his fifth foul against Lewayne Jones with 13 seconds left as Jones brought the ball upcourt trailing by four.

"We made mistakes tonight we weren't making in the first five games of the season, and that's when we were a very young and inexperienced team," Essington said. "There's no reason for a foul like that."

Jones missed the front end of a bonus, but Phillip Butler grabbed the rebound. He was fouled by Jones with 11 ticks left, but also missed the front end.

But wait a minute. A lane violation gave Butler another chance. He missed again only to see the Trojans throw the ball away at the other end. But Deanthony Simmons then fired a wild pass/shot out of bounds as time expired and the Trojans' four-point win was secure.

A win is a win, especially in the post-season, but Essington wasn't quite in that frame of mind.

"We just don't have our heads in the game at times and that makes it tough," he said. "We keep saying we will do it, but there's a difference between talking about it and doing it."

The game was tight all the way with the exception of a portion of the third quarter when the Trojans built up an 11-point lead. The lead changed hands 11 times in the first half, including seven times in the first quarter with neither team holding more than a four-point lead until Quincy Williams' free throw that gave Madison a 31-26 edge at halftime.

The Trojan offense again was bogged down as Clarence Williams had another slow shooting night. He made only one of seven shots in the first half and finished with eight points, although he managed eight assists.

"Clarence needs to have better shot selection," Essington said. "He takes some shots every once in a while that Larry Bird couldn't make. But we missed some good shots, too."

Both teams shot poorly in the first half (just over 30 percent), but things heated up in a wild third quarter. Jones had a pair three-point shooters, so we couldn't relax even when we got a 15-point lead."

Erwin Claggett played in his first varsity game and contributed 11 points. Five Devils were in double figures as Daryl Jackson added 16 points. Hosea King had 14 and Lionel Wiley had 10.

"We have 11 players and they will all be expected to help somewhere along the line now," Harris said. "It's crunch time."

Steve Peters had 13 for the Greyhounds but Ronald Vann only had six.

"Vann usually hurts us," Harris said. "We have to watch out for all of them."

The Greyhounds made only two field goals in the third quarter as Venice extended its lead to 61-40, and Lebanon was hurt further when Steve Ogden left with an injury. Jackson, Wiley and Carlos Briggs added slam dunks to propel the Devils into the title game.

"It's going to be a good game no matter who we get," Harris said. "Assumption has improved all year and Madison is always tough."

Tickets for Friday's title game are on sale at the participating schools. The winner will play in the Vandalia Sectional on Wednesday.

SCORING

LEBANON 13 14 13 25-55

of baskets wrapped around one by Steve Sanders for a 37-26 lead. But the Wildcats then went on an 11-0 run to take a 44-21 lead. McKire had 12 of those points, including the last six on a pair of three-pointers.

His bomb from the right side gave the Wildcats the lead, but Jessie Leonard came right back with a clutch three-pointer of his own to tie the game. Clarence Williams then hit a three-point shot to give the Trojans a 44-41 lead.

"The third quarter really was a war of attrition that had," Essington said. "We just weren't executing a lot of three-point shots and two-on-ones. We were making the wrong pass or driving to the basket at the wrong time."

The game was tied at 49-49 going into the fourth quarter, but a pair of Jason Briggs baskets gave the Trojans a 51-49 lead. We were making the wrong pass or driving to the basket at the wrong time."

Marcus Crawford's three-point shot closed the gap to 61-60 and after a Jones free throw, Crawford tied the game. But Quincy Williams put the Trojans ahead for good when he drove in from the left side, collected his own rebound and scored with 1:01 left — all while Essington was screaming for a timeout from the bench.

"Well, we got the timeout after the basket anyway," said a relieved Essington, who could grow old before his time with many more like this.

The last minute of the game was a comedy of errors, with turnovers and missed free throws interrupted only by Jones' two free throws to clinch the game. Jones is coming along well after missing the first half of the season for academic reasons.

"He's doing some good things, but he gives away some other things," Essington said.

So the Trojans live for another day.

"I would like to keep going for a couple more weeks," Essington said. "I can understand the loss at Cahokia because we had three tough games last week. And I know these two teams know each other. But that's no reason not to give full effort."

We've been in pressure situations before in the fourth quarter this year and handled it better than we did tonight. They weren't pressuring us that much, but we acted like we had to get things done right away. We're not patient at times."
